Suspect Faces Lie Test in Store Killings

Sesqui Fair Is Imperiled By Ruling Of McGrath

Ban on Nonprofit Corporation Plan Means Alternate Site Must Be Found

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

The White House announced yesterday Attorney General McGrath has ruled out a proposal for forming a private non-profit corporation to run the Sesquicentennial Freedom Fair.

Paul Massmann, general manager for the Sesqui Commission, said the ruling kills the prospect of having the Freedom Fair on the East Capitol st. site which has been planned for some time.

He added, however, that a Freedom Fair may be held if a suitable site can be found.

Massmann said that the private corporation setup needed for locating the Freedom Fair on the restricted East Capitol st. area would not be necessary if a larger site were found where industry could rent exhibition sites and the rentals could be used to finance construction of the buildings.

First Reaction Gloomy

The first reaction in congressional quarters was that the ruling struck a death blow at the Freedom Fair idea, one of the main features of the Sesquicentennial. This conclusion was based on the thought that there would be no chance of enacting further legislation for promoting the Freedom Fair in a session that started out with sharp criticism by some members of Congress of the Sesquicentennial Commission.

Congress Must Act

Officials said the McGrath ruling made two major points. One is that for the Sesqui Commission to grant a private corporation the right to run the Freedom Fair would violate a section of the Government Corporations Act. The section forbids Federal agencies from creating corporations to act for the United States without specific authority of Congress.

The second major point of the McGrath ruling, officials said, was that there was a question whether the commission could transfer to a private corporation any duties Congress gave it to do. The officials said neither point of the McGrath ruling would stand in the way of renting industries space in a larger Freedom Fair site to build their own structures. The rent would be used by the commission for utilities, landscaping, walks, roads and the like.

E. Capital St. Out

Massmann said that with the East Capitol st. site out of the picture, he feels that the Freedom Fair has a chance if about 200 acres of level ground can be found for it. He said with such a site the rental of ground area to industry would permit turn-

Escaped Lorton Prisoner Flees Trap in District

A prisoner at Lorton Reformatory who escaped earlier in the day was thought to be in a black Hudson which was fired upon by police in the 1400 block of Holbrook st. ne. last last night.

Thomas Daniels, 32, of Germantown, Md., was believed to have stolen the car, and made his escape from the woods near the reformatory.

A trap was set in Washington near the home of his wife, Sue, but the car believed to be the one driven by Daniels speeded away despite a warning shot from police.

Truman Asks 'Hill' to Aid Small Firms

Program Would Transfer RFC to Commerce Department

A broad program of assistance to small business, including Government-insured loans up to $25,000, was proposed to Congress by President Truman yesterday.

He said it would cost the Government very little, would yield the Nation "great returns," and he asked for action before Congress adjourns.

In the same special message, the President proposed putting the Reconstruction Finance Corporation under the supervision of the Secretary of Commerce. RFC has been an independent agency since its creation in 1932. Mr. Truman said he would present a reorganization plan to effect the transfer.

He told Congress that while business is thriving, it is not growing fast enough. He said small businesses have a key role in American prosperity, providing jobs for more than 20 million. And the Government, he added, "can and should promote conditions under which well-managed businesses have ample opportunities for growth."

Five-Point Program

He proposed a five-point program to carry out this purpose:

1. Insurance, "on a self-sustaining basis," of bank loans up to $25,000, repayable within five years. He likened this to the present Federal insurance of loans for home improvements, with banks bearing a portion of the risk. He said an insurance premium could be fixed to cover all probable expenses and losses.

2. The creation of Federally chartered and promoted national investment companies "to provide equity capital and long-term loans for efficiently managed businesses unable to finance themselves on reasonable terms through the organized securities markets." The companies would be supervised by the Federal Reserve System, but

Jail Inmates Questioned

Family Refuses D. C. Request To Delay Burial of Davis

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Last-minute efforts failed yesterday to delay burial in Fayetteville, N. C., of Leroy Davis, 30-year-old prisoner who died mysteriously in District Jail last Friday after a struggle with jail guards.

Fayetteville police interrupted funeral proceedings with a request from Washington police to postpone the burial for one day to allow for a second autopsy.

Fayetteville Chief L. F. Worrell said he had been asked by Homicide Squad Lieut. John K. Baker "to find out if the family would be willing to hold off for a day so that Washington could send a man down here for another look at the body."

Worrell arrived at the Rodgers Funeral Home in Fayetteville while services were in progress shortly after 4 p. m. He said that Davis' mother, wife and brother "were unwilling" to delay the burial.

Five Government agencies, including the FBI, have been investigating the death since Wednesday. Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy has said Davis died of acute congestive heart failure, but is conducting new tests to determine what caused the acute congestive heart failure.

Since the investigations started, Jail Guard James E. Kirkpatrick has admitted to police he wrapped a towel around Davis' neck during

Cut in Wine Tax Rejected

House Slashes Fund for PHA; Schedules Saturday Session

The House last night ordered an unusual Saturday session today on the 29-billion-dollar omnibus appropriation bill, after another day of slow progress on the big single-package measure.

Republicans yesterday succeeded in making one of their few cuts in the bill. An amendment by Representative Francis Case (R., S. Dak.) reduced administrative outlays for the Public Housing Administration nearly three million dollars, from $11,700,000 to $8,750,000.

But additions to the bill, since it was reported before Easter, still more than offset the cuts by around 65 million dollars.

By a vote of 46 to 24, the House meanwhile voted to liberalize the bill's sharp restrictions on the number of ships that can receive the Maritime Commission's operating differential ship subsidies. A fight to increase funds for training of merchant marine personnel was in full swing when the House adjourned overnight.

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday decided to leave the excise tax on wines unchanged after refusing to cut Federal levies on liquor and beer.

The committee then pushed its search for tax loopholes to plug, in an effort to offset about $1,064,500,000 in excise tax cuts.

From Ball Park Booth

'Bums' Star' Is in Good Focus On TV 'Til He Gets Bum's Rush

A 23-year-old baseball fan, who said he was "manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers," crashed a television show at Griffith Stadium last night with such force that he landed in the Thirteenth Precinct station.

Identified by police as Walter Kozacheako, of no fixed address, the unannounced and unwanted "star" fought his way into the video booth at the ball park just as WTTG announcers Bob Wolff and Howie Williams were telling how Detroit had beaten Washington, 9-6.

Wolff and Williams said the intruder wanted to put in a plug for him beloved Bums.

Wolff, sensing something that couldn't happen even in Flatbush, pulled the microphone away while Williams tried to restrain the uninvited guest. Seeing Williams was having his troubles, Wolff suggested over the air that the video crew, whose cameras were focused on the scene all the while, break off the telecast and return to the studios, which the crew did.

Wolff then joined Williams in the struggle to quiet the "guest" while Eddie Shapiro, WTTG statistician, figured the best thing to do in this crisis was to get a policeman, which he did.

Finally, one policeman, two, three and finally five arrived and succeeded in handcuffing the stocky, blond TV crasher and led him to a waiting patrol wagon.

James Simon, who sponsors the after-the-game video show, noticed part of the struggle on his set at home and phoned Thirteenth Precinct police to announce he plans to reward the policeman who arrested Kozacheako with a television set.

Remington Again Swears He Never Gave Her Secrets

NYHT News Service

Elizabeth T. Bentley, self-styled former Communist courier, may be recalled by the House Committee on Un-American Activities to testify in the reopened loyalty probe of William W. Remington, Department of Commerce economist.

This was announced yesterday by Chairman John S. Wood (D., Ga.) after the committee questioned Remington for three hours without shaking his denials that he had ever given Miss Bentley any secret Government information.

This questioning followed Thursday's accusations by two other former Communists who testified under oath that they knew Remington as a Communist and attended party meetings with him in 1936-37 at Knoxville, Tenn., where he was working for the Tennessee Valley Authority as a 19-year-old messenger.

Remington vehemently denied these new charges yesterday, as he had Thursday, declaring under oath that he had never been a Communist and had no idea at the time that persons he associated with at Knoxville were "secret Communists."

Autocrat of Dice Tables

'Voices' Lead Robbed Gambler To Destruction in Potomac

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

A body found floating in the Potomac River late Thursday was identified early yesterday as that of Robert (Ryebread) Shulman, autocrat of local dice tables.

An awkwardly scribbled note on four two-by-four-inch pieces of paper was found by police in a Cadillac convertible, abandoned near Hains Point.

Shulman's body was found floating in the river nearby at 6:15 p. m. It was not identified until early yesterday, when Wallace Beach, described by police as a big-time numbers operator, appeared at the morgue.

An autopsy showed yesterday that death was due to drowning, but Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy withheld a certificate pending further investigation.

Captain Robert V. Murray, assistant chief of detectives, said "evidence so far makes it appear to be a suicide."

Shulman, 39, lived at 5821 3d pl. nw., listed as the home of Rose Marie Stipsky. The note found by police was directed to "Dearest Rose."

Almose illegibly scrawled with a soft lead pencil, it said the writer thought he was "nutty" or "going nutty." He was hearing voices, it said, "and people talk to me and I ask them something else."

Police found a ¾-inch piece of pencil lead in the pocket of Shulman's topcoat, which covered a

Police Seek To Tie Youth To Murders

Former Employe Seized in Yoke Robbery Stabbing Of D. C. Druggist

By Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporter

Police today will use a lie detector on a former Lansburgh Department Store employe in an effort to link him to the Good Friday murders of two store watchmen.

The suspect, William Andrew Tyler, jr., 18, of 2302 Pomeroy rd. se., was arrested at his home yesterday at 1 a. m. charged with the brutal stabbing and beating of a druggist.

The druggist, Jack Katzoff, 34, of 2814 Erie st. se., positively identified Tyler as the man who assaulted him in a yoke robbery Thursday night.

Police said Tyler admitted having once worked in the Lansburgh tea shop.

They pointed out that the two watchmen were slain with an 8-inch boning knife later identified as having been taken from the tea shop.

In addition, police said, Tyler smokes cigarettes of the same brand as those stolen from the store the night of the murder while other brands were ignored.

Katzoff identified Tyler in a special police line-up brought to his bedside at Gallinger Hospital where he was undergoing treatment for a stab wound in the back and lacerations of the head, face and legs.

The 6-foot, 190-pound Tyler, maddened, and protesting innocence twice lunged at Katzoff during the identification.

Katzoff told police he was grabbed from behind in the 2400

Senate Bill On Security Adds Millions

Post Reporter

The Senate Finance Committee yesterday tentatively approved the final draft of its pay-as-you-go Social Security bill extending coverage to an estimated 10 million more persons.

The action was taken after the group completed a thorough revision of the old age insurance program. The committee had previously agreed to double retirement benefits.

Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.) told reporters he believed the measure would be ready for Senate action some time next week. A few technical points in drafting the law remain to be worked out, he said.

The group yesterday voted to include some 800,000 farm laborers and an estimated 200,000 sharecroppers who are paid in cash.

The measure does not set forth the method of handling Social Security taxes in these cases.

The farm laborers covered would be those who regularly work five days a week for the same employer.

The committee also agreed to an estimated 45 million dollars in

Weiner Aided Amerasia 6, Budenz Says

But Witness Fails To Name 'Fixer' in Document Thefts

Louis F. Budenz said yesterday that former Communist Party Treasurer Robert W. Weiner helped make the "financial arrangements" for the defense of the six defendants in the 1945 American spy case.

Budenz, a former Communist, had promised to name the man who arranged the "theft and fix" in the case to a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee investigating Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy's Communist charges.

He failed to do so, but did say in a letter to the committee that Weiner was "at least active in supervising the financial arrangements" for the defense of the six persons who were charged with stealing secret Government documents.

Two of the defendants later were fined and the others were cleared.

McCarthy Contradicted

Frank Bielaski, former agent of the wartime Office of Strategic Services, who took part in FBI raids on the offices of the magazine Amerasia, met with the subcommittee in closed session Thursday.

McCarthy claimed Bielaski was ready to swear that State Department personnel helped slip A-bomb secrets to Russia through the magazine. But Bielaski said later he would have to "qualify" McCarthy's statement

Budenz said in an April 28 radio speech at Peekskill, N. Y., that he would name a "very important conspiratorial Communist" who engineered the theft and "helped fix" the Amerasia case.

He did not repeat this charge in Foreign Aid Bill Passed By Senate, Cut 8½ Pct.

Half-Billion Slash Defeated 40-40; Point 4 Program Approved 37-36

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

The Senate last night passed the huge foreign aid bill almost exactly as the Administration wanted it—with one important exception.

It cut 250 million dollars, or 8½ percent, from the amount requested for the third year of the Marshall Plan in Europe. The House had cut the same amount on March 31.

Otherwise a disciplined Democratic majority beat back every Republican attempt to slash the amount or to put other limitations on aid programs in Europe, the Far East and in underdeveloped areas throughout the world.

Twice during a nine-hour session the bill had the closest of close shaves. In one of them a coalition of Republican and Southern Democratic economizers just failed, by a 40-40 tie, to cut half a billion dollars from the Marshall Plan.

In the other, the Point Four program of technical assistance scraped through by a 37-to-36 vote, without a cut in funds or any change except a new provision for a loyalty check of employes.

The vote for final passage of the $3,116,000,000 authorization bill was 60 to 8—a result decisive enough to be a happy send-off for Secretary of State Dean Acheson, who leaves today for important conferences with European foreign ministers in Paris and London. Much of American foreign policy was wrapped in the bill, and much depended on its passage.

Those who voted against it to the bitter end were the Republican floor leader, Senator Wherry (Neb.), six of his Republican colleagues, Senators Dworshak (Idaho), Jenner (Ind.), Kem (Mo.), Malone (Nev.), Williams (Del.) and Young (N. Dak.), and a lone Democrat, Senator Olin Johnston of South Carolina.

Funds Still To Be Voted

The bill is only an authorization, which means that the actual funds still have to be voted by the appropriation committees and approved by both houses. It gives permission to spend:

For the third year of the Marshall Plan, $2,850,000,000;

For economic recovery in Korea, 100 million;

For economic help in Formosa and "the general area of China," about 94 million—appropriated last year but still unspent;

For the relief of Arab refugees in the Middle East, $27,450,000; and

For a start on the Point Four program of technical help in backward areas, 45 million dollars, of which 10 has already been authorized under existing programs.

U. S. Held Likely To Let Pakistan Buy Arms in U. S.

By the United Press

Informed Government quarters disclosed yesterday that the way may be cleared in the near future for Pakistan, the world's largest Moslem nation, to purchase arms in the United States.

Pakistan Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan is understood to have mentioned the subject during secret talks with Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson and Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, at the Pentagon Thursday.

Officials said the United States Government would "probably be disposed" to let Pakistan purchase whatever arms were found available in this country. Liaquat, in his talks here, has stressed the stable, anti-Communist nature of his country, and its "strategic position."

In view of the announced American policy of equal treatment for India and Pakistan, it was assumed that any arms-buying privileges allowed Pakistan also would go to India.

There was some doubt, however, that the arms Pakistan wants are available because of commitments under the European military aid program.

Way Open for Future Action

Baltic Plane Dispute Reaches Stalemate, U. S. Note Implies

The Baltic plane dispute with Russia reached a stalemate yesterday with renewed American charges that the Soviets are solely responsible for the loss of the Navy Privateer and its crew of 10 men.

A new note to Moscow accused Russia of flouting its international responsibilities in dealing with the dangerous episode. It implied strongly at the same time that this Government does not intend to press the dispute further now by means of more complaints to the Kremlin.

The way was left open for a possible future appeal to the United Nations or action through some other channel. There has been no hint from responsible officials, however, whether the Administration plans new steps or will add the Baltic incident to the long list of unresolved East-West quarrels.

"It is clearly impossible to resolve this issue so long as the Soviet government refuses to base its position upon the facts in the case," Moscow was told. The State Department:

1. Declared again that the only American military plane in the Baltic area at the time was the Navy Privateer patrol craft and not an Army B-29 bomber as Moscow contended.

2. Reiterated that the Navy plane was unarmed and was never over Soviet occupied territory.

3. Charged Moscow failed to carry out a careful investigation and insisted on an "erroneous account."

4. Rejected as wholly without foundation the Soviet counter-protest against "the gross violation by an American military aircraft of the Soviet frontier."

The United States note said the Soviet "disregard for law, custom and the opinion of mankind constitutes a further obstacle to the establishment of harmonious relations among nations."

Matthews Approves Findings in B-36 Row

Secretary of the Navy Matthews last night approved the recommendation of a naval court of inquiry that no further disciplinary action be taken against Cedric R. Worth, admitted author of the anonymous memorandum that led to a congressional investigation of the B-36 bomber last year.

Matthews also upheld the court's opinion that Comdr. Thomas D. Davies of Seattle, Wash., who was named an interested party during its inquiry, committed no offense and incurred no "serious" blame.

The Secretary likewise supported the court's decision that other witnesses who appeared before it, including Capt. John G. Crommelin, had "committed no offense and incurred no blame."

The court of inquiry, headed by Admiral Thomas C. Kinkaid, investigated to determine whether any other Navy personnel was involved in preparing and circulating the memorandum that brought on the B-36 inquiry. The memorandum hinted at Democratic Party fund-raising deals involving Floyd Odlum, whose Atlas Corp. controls the company building B-36s, and also involving Defense Secretary Louis Johnson. It charged that the big Air Force bomber is obsolete. Worth was an $8500-a-year special assistant to Dan Kimball, Undersecretary of the Navy, when he acknowledged to a House committee that he had written the memorandum.

Worth, a former Hollywood scenario writer who became a Navy commander during the war, recanted the charges in the memo during his testimony. He was suspended as special assistant to Kimball and then resigned. However, Worth still retains his commission as a commander in the Naval Reserve.

The court of inquiry blamed Worth seriously for "violating the trust" of his position as Kimball's assistant, though it recommended that no further disciplinary action be taken against him.

Other witnesses before the court, each of whom the court said had incurred no blame, included:

Comdr. W. E. Sweeney, now stationed at Norfolk, Va.; Capt. Leroy C. Simpler, of Washington, D. C., who is now on seat duty; Lieut. Samuel P. Ingram, of Parkfairfax, Va., now on inactive duty; and Captain Crommelin of Montgomery, Ala., now on an indefinite furlough for continuing to criticize Pentagon policies after the Navy had ordered him to desist.

Wiggins Asks Press to Join Anti-Red Fight

Minneapolis, May 5 (AP).—A "Congress of Free Newspapermen" was proposed here tonight to offset Russia's propaganda army in the world battle for the minds of men.

"The great newspapers, the radio networks and stations, advertising agencies and all enterprises joined in the communications industry might very properly mobilize their enormous resources for this crusade," said J. R. Wiggins.

"The surprising thing is that this endeavor has been delayed so long."

Wiggins, managing editor of The Washington Post, said such a drive would demonstrate, by the superiority of its technique and vigor of its effort the superiority of free men voluntarily engaged in a great cause.

Wiggins talked before the annual Short Course for Editors at the University of Minnesota.

The Capital editor called the Federal Government's 34 million dollar propaganda campaign "a puny effort" compared to the 27 billion dollars budgeted for the military and economic phases of the Cold War. He pointed out that the General Motors Corp. alone spent 45 million dollars for advertising in 1949.

"We are not peddling a universal panacea," said Wiggins. "Nor are we trying to subject any peoples to our domination. We seek for ourselves only that which we would confer on others—the right to govern themselves, the right to individual freedom and the right to work out our national destiny in peace . . .

It would libel freedom to suggest that we cannot gain for this ideal the support of all mankind if we put to the task the science, skill and resources that are at our disposal."

Truman's Optimism Attacked in House

Representative Cole (R., N. Y.), told the House yesterday President Truman's optimistic statement about peace prospects was "untimely, ill-advised and deplorable."

Cole said it came at a time when defense leaders, troubled by world conditions, were asking more money for defense and an extension of the draft law.

He said he hopes the President on his cross-country tour next week takes the people "into his confidence, a privilege he has denied the Congress, and explains the basis for his optimism."

Another Republican, Representative Anderson of California, raised the question whether Mr. Truman is getting the same information from military leaders that Congress is.

And Representative Vorys (R., Ohio), member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, commented that if "Mr. Truman is right, then the State Department is wrong."

Cole, a member of the House Armed Services Committee, said that at the very moment Mr. Truman spoke the committee was considering and voting extension of the draft law at the request of military leaders.

6 Killed, 100 Hurt in Midwest By Twisters, Blizzards, Rain

Chicago, May 5 (U.P.).—Winds of hurricane velocity today blasted the midcontinent from Texas to Minnesota to Pennsylvania, leaving six dead and more than 100 injured in an outburst of violent spring weather that produced tornadoes, thunderstorms and "baby" blizzards.

Winds clocked at 88 miles an hour hit Superior, Wis., injuring at least 15 persons and causing damages of more than one million dollars.

Two giant coal docks there were flattened. Huge traveling cranes toppled as the wind struck so suddenly workmen were unable to use safety devices. Five were injured.

The gale smashed store windows and hurled mannekins into streets. Elsewhere in the State telephone wires and trees were toppled over a wide area.

Henry Alpen, a 72-year-old workman was killed at Fond du Lac, Wis., when an outdoor movie screen he was helping build blew over and crushed him.

Iowa was ripped by winds up to 84 miles an hour. Des Moines felt the full force of the gale and power and telephone poles fell like straws. Many autos were crushed.

Wallace Boswell was electrocuted at Des Moines by a fallen wire. At Madrid, Iowa, a workman was killed when a light tower was blown down.

Some gusts at Des Moines reached 90 miles per hour and the airport reported unofficial velocities up to 100 miles per hour.

At Madison, Wis., University of Wisconsin experts said the dust kicked up by the wind rivaled Dust Bowl days.

At Madison, Harry Blucher, 34, was killed by a rain of chimney bricks from his own roof. The wind blew a tree against the chimney, dashing the bricks on Blucher, who was passing below.

Weather forecasters said the winds came from the violent clash of a Southern warm front with cold air in the North. The winds were slammed northward toward Canada and were due to diminish by Saturday.

At Pittsburgh, 23 passengers were hurt, three badly, when lightning struck a streetcar, setting it afire.

The violent storm caused flash floods at Pittsburgh and piled up an estimated $500,000 damages.

Last night and today the tornadoes skipped across Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas and turned up in Minnesota where a small twister shattered farm buildings near Maple Lake.

The worst twister hit Perryton, Tex., where one man was killed. Another tornado splintered a wartime Government housing project at Great Bend, Kans., injuring 50 persons.

Powerful winds that reached up to 70 miles an hour stirred up stinging dust storms over most of Kansas. The State reported rain, snow and hailstones four inches in diameter.

eventually would be owned by private investors and institutions.

3. Broadened lending powers for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, with relaxed collateral requirements on loans to small concerns if management abilities and potential earnings provide reasonable expectation of repayment. He also recommended that the present maximum 10-year maturity on all types of business loans be increased to at least 15 years.

4. Establishment in the Department of Commerce of a clearing house for scientific, engineering and managerial information of interest to small business.

5. Centered responsibility in the Secretary of Commerce for the entire program, with the exception of the proposed national investment companies, which would be under the Federal Reserve.

Two Handicaps

Mr. Truman said the two great handicaps now facing small enterprises are the cost and difficulty of getting new capital, and the cost and difficulty of keeping abreast of new production and management techniques.

The messages said that small business is the first to suffer from an economic downturn and the last to recover. It added that the program is needed to help take up the slack in employment and to curb "undesirable concentration of economic power."

Mr. Truman argued:

"Expansion of our economy is required to provide full markets for the rising productive capacity of our factories and farms. It is needed to provide adequate employment opportunities for our growing labor force. It is essential if we are to continue to play a strong part in working for peace."

Details of the proposed insured bank loans will be filled in later, but the President explained it in this manner:

"Each bank would pass upon loan applications and the loans would be insured against loss, subject only to compliance with Federally-prescribed standards. No prior approval of individual loans by any Government officer would be required."

The possibility for action on the bulk of his program this year appeared, at first glance, to be slight. Numerous important bills are awaiting action, and most of the members are becoming restless to get home and start campaigning.

Step Up Peace Propaganda, Nation Urged

Senator Brien McMahon, chairman of the Congressional Joint Atomic Energy Committee, last night urged that the United States step up its effort to tell the world of America's desire for peace.

McMahon, speaking at a convention dinner of the Marine Corps Reserve Officers Association in the Washington Hotel, said the country had a choice of two policies:

1. It can "go on piling up armanents and hope against hope that something will happen to the minds in the Kremlin."

2. Or it can try to mobilize public opinion and pierce the iron curtain, "and when that happens they will not be able to fight."

Sees Decreased Liberty

McMahon said that the Nation's armament expenditures are "going up and up" and it "liberties are going down and down," that "as you increase regimentation you increase the power of the central government," and that "as long as this goes on you have a cloud of fear hanging over our free enterprisers" that is "paralyzing."

McMahon said the United States should tell the world that the Nation intends to arm and to stay armed, but that it is spending some 16 billion dollars a year on armaments, which "is incompatible with our aims and aspirations."

The Nation should say, McMahon said, that it is willing to take a substantial portion of this armaments expenditure and put it into the United Nations, if in return there could be a "decent" control of armaments, the Soviet Union would cut its armed strength to the same degree, and an effective international system of atomic energy control could be had.

Speaks on Status of Corps

Gen. Clifton B. Cates, Marine Corps commandant, was guest of honor at the dinner and dance.

Senator Paul H. Douglas of Illinois, and Representatives Donald L. Jackson, of California, and Michael Mansfield of Montana, will speak at the 12:30 p. m. luncheon today.

Earlier in the day, Col. Melvin J. Maas, U. S. M. C. R., national president and former member of Congress from Minnesota, said in a speech three steps were necessary to "settle the future status of the corps and to assure that it will in effect be the potent aggressive force necessary"—

1. The commandant must sit as a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

2. "There must be full representation of Marines on all joint staffs, committees, and from the "little chiefs' down."

3. The minimum strength of the corps should be established by law at not less than 6 percent of the combined personnel strength of the armed services.

Baltz Named to Post

District Commissioners yesterday appointed Edward C. Baltz to a four-year term on the Motor Vehicle Parking Agency. Baltz, president of the Perpetual Building Association and former chairman of the parking committee of the Keystone Automobile Club Advisory Board, replaced Lee D. Butler who resigned.

M'Grath Rule Deals Freedom Fair Body Blow

ing over to exhibiting corporations the main financial burden of the construction.

He said the Government would have to do the building on the East Capitol st. site because of its restricted size. Massmann said the only ideal sites in Washington for the Fair are the Anacostia Naval Base and approximately 200 acres of Bolling Air Force Base. Defense officials have reportedly been cool to this idea.

Massmann said the problem of what to do next about the question of the Freedom Fair will probably be submitted to the executive committee of the Sesquicentennial Commission Monday or Tuesday.

The Freedom Fair was originally scheduled to open last month, the actual sesquicentennial anniversary of the founding of Washington. The fair was postponed when it became impossible to clear construction arrangements in time.

Other sesquicentennial activities, including the construction of an open-air amphitheater in Rock Creek Park, have been going forward.

Capitol sources pointed out McGrath must have made his ruling reluctantly because he was the leader last year—while still a Senator—of the fight to get money for the Sesqui.

Massmann said that the commission sought Attorney General McGrath's opinion on forming the nonprofit corporation "as a vehicle for obtaining speed and flexibility in the construction of the Freedom Fair on a site which admittedly was restrictive in size.

"Since that specific idea has been found impractical, our plan now is to seek a site which in size will permit industry to erect its own buildings under the architectural supervision and control of the commission.

"Thus by renting ground areas to industry, the Government capital investment is immediately reduced by two thirds . This plan also reduces the design and construction time by 60 to 90 days. If the required area can be found—and we believe it can—a greater Freedom Fair can be built"

The officials said this could not be done in the approximately 100 acres provided in the East Capitol st. location, because it was too cramped to give industry the incentive to lease ground space.

The East Capitol st. development plan, therefore, was all keyed to the idea of industries renting space from the blueprints of buildings to be constructed by the Government. That plan collided with a legal requirement that the Government not spend for construction the funds obtained from advance payments of rental until the building was actually ready for use, officials said.

The reason the Sesqui commission went to Attorney General McGrath for approval of its plan to set up a corporation to run the Freedom Fair stems from faulty draftsmanship of the initial Sesqui commission act passed by Congress. Instead of using similar acts from the past as a model, granting the commission exceptions from various Government regulations, the act merely set up the commission in a general way.

Since the Freedom Fair would depend on income from exhibitors to pay for the building, it obviously could not have the money in hand before beginning construction.

General Manager Massmann, brought here from Chicago at $25,000 a year to run the Sesqui some weeks ago served what amounted to an ultimatum to the Sesqui Commission that all the legal road blocks must be out of the way by May 15 if there was to be a Freedom Fair in 1951.

Even at that, Massmann told the commission's executive committee, the Fair could not open until about July 1, 1951, instead of April 15, 1951.

Security Bill Adds Millions

additional benefits for public assistance and service programs to children. This figure is contrasted with 275 million dollars in the measure passed by the House last year.

The committee yesterday agreed to increase the Federal share in Federal-State programs for needy children to 47 million dollars a year. The present Federal share is 22 million dollars.

Also added was 20 million dollars annually for Federal-State benefits to dependent children. The House bill would add 11 million persons to the 35 million already covered by Federal old-age assistance.

The committee reconsidered its previous action excluding all employes of religious denominations and organizations owned and controlled by a religious denomination. Under the new plan, such religious denominations would have an opportunity to obtain coverage for employes on a voluntary basis. Hearings indicate, spokesmen said, that most religious institutions would avail themselves of this opportunity.

Other nonprofit employment in charitable or educational institutions of a nonreligious nature would come under compulsory coverage.

Certain Federal civilian employes not covered under an existing retirement system were brought under Social Security. The Senate committee included an additional 100,000 employes serving under temporary appointment pending final determination of eligibility for permanent or indefinite appointment.

Monthly benefits of persons already retired would be increased an average of 90 percent under the Senate bill, compared to 70 percent under the House bill. For those who retire after 1950, the benefits would be increased even more.

FBI May Get Limited Access to Spy Fuchs

Kennan Worried

State Dept. Morale Hurt By McCarthy

Milwaukee, May 5 (NYHT).—George F. Kennan, counselor of the State Department, warned tonight that the department might lose most of its "quiet, sensitive and gifted" top officials if the present atmosphere of "abuse and derision" continues.

Speaking in the home State of Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, Republican, who has charged that there are Communist, sex perverts and poor security risks in the State Department, Kennan told a meeting of the Institute on United Nations Foreign Policy that the mental strain of fighting the cold war left top officials with very slender margin of physical and spiritual energy to absorb ridicule.

"I must tell you," he said, "that the atmosphere of public life in Washington does not have to deteriorate much further to produce a situation in which very few of our more quiet and sensitive and gifted people will be able to continue in Government."

He warned that unless the United States could mobilize its best brains for prosecution of the cold war there could be no promising assurances of the outcome.

It was "not fair" to these men, he said, to make them scapegoats of whatever dissatisfaction and bewilderment the country might feel concerning its international position. Neither was it fair to the great body of citizens, he added.

Perhaps only those who have lived many years in totalitarian countries can feel how vitally important it was to preserve "the spirit of tolerance and liberality in our relations with each other and the readiness to give the other fellow the benefit of the doubt, where doubt exists," Kennan said.

Great Britain reportedly has proposed to give FBI agents limited access to Dr. Klaus Fuchs, Russia's ex-ace atom spy now serving a 14-year sentence in London for violating the Official Secrets Act.

It appears doubtful that the FBI will consider limited access to Fuchs sufficient for its avowed purposes of probing to the bottom the atomic spy situation dramatized by the arrest and conviction of Britain's A-bomb scientist.

There is no double, however, that the Fuchs case remains a sore point in British-American relations and continues to block all progress toward reviving the wartime atomic partnership which those two countries and Canada shared.

It was as a result of that collaboration that Fuchs came to this country to work with other scientists cleared by the British government during the war—and helped to produce the atomic bomb even while informing Russian Communist agents of what was going on. He made another trip here about two years after the war.

These facts plus Fuch's subsequent arrest, confession and conviction in Britain—he is a former patriate German—shook the very foundations of American-British cooperation on any future atomic partnership.

The FBI, according to information which came out at the time, had a hand in breaking the Fuchs' case. But after the original facts were developed, chiefs of the American security force evidently felt they were not sure of obtaining all the information necessary from Fuchs to give leads on possible other Russian spies.

In addition to requesting full information from the British on the case, therefore, it appears now that the United States had also asked for the right of unrestricted access of its agents to Fuchs with full opportunity to question him on his operations and conections.

The British were apparently reluctant to accede to this request for reasons which do not show on the surface. But they now reportedly have informed the American Government that FBI agents can question Fuchs under certain conditions. These conditions are not known outside official quarters.

The British Embassy, the State Department and the Federal Bureau of Investigation itself met all inquiries on these developments with a refusal to answer any questions, at least on the record. The nearest approach to official comment came when certain informants who asked to remain unidentified said that "as of now" the British and Americans working on the case are cooperating.

Officials do not deny, however, that there are some mysterious angles to the Fuchs incident. One is the failure to date of British and American police to come up with any more arrests although it was widely predicted several months ago that the capture of Fuchs would pull the plug on a whole spy system.

Miss Bentley May Be Called

told the committee after receiving permission to examine the testimony of these two former Communists: "Even a cursory glance at these two documents shows gaps and holes we could drive a truck through."

He added that Remington would have a statement replying to the accusations, which were made by admitted former Communists identified as Kenneth McConnell and Howard Allen Bridgman, after he had studied their testimony further.

Miss Bentley first accused Remington in 1948 of giving her information for a Soviet spy ring. This led to his temporary suspension and an inquiry by the Senate Investigations Committee. He was later cleared by the loyalty review board after Miss Bentley failed to appear to repeat her charges.

Representative Wood declined to say whether the Un-American Activities Committee had been in touch with Miss Bentley, who was recently reported to have given up a teaching post at Mundelein College in Chicago to return to Washington.

The committee, in its questioning of Remington yesterday, went back over much of the same ground covered by the Senate investigation without producing any new information.

The 32-year-old economist admitted he had met Miss Bentley 6 or 10 times in 1942-43 to explain the operations of the War Production Board, for which he then worked, but insisted he had never given her any information that was not available to the public.

He admitted that he had never heard about the Manhattan Engineering project early in 1944—1½ years before the first atomic bomb was dropped—but said he thought it was a program to produce synthetic gasoline and was located in New York.

Remington, pressed for some explanation of why three former Communists would "bear false witness against you under oath," gave these views:

"I believe he might have included me on these grounds. I was very active in an AFL union in Knoxville. I apparently was associated with a secret Communist—Howard Bridgman. If there were other secret Communists among my close friends, I did not know it.

"I was working with them on the same problems and using the same language. I think Bridgman knowing some of my friends were secret Communists, might have assumed I was, too. I was active only in those labor union activities I thought were above board."

his letter to the subcommittee, saying only that he had "direct knowledge" from conversations at Communist Party headquarters that Weiner led a drive to raise funds for the defense of the six defendants.

Budenz said that Weiner also was known as "Welwel Warzover."

McCarthy is scheduled to address the case in a Nation-wide radio broadcast from Chicago tonight. He said he will attack President Truman's decision to let the subcommitte see State Department loyalty files bearing on the Amerasia case.

McCarthy claims he needs the FBI files to prove his case and that Mr. Truman's willingness to let the subcommittee see the State Department data, while withholding the FBI information, is a "political maneuver."

Tydings Promises Disloyalty Revelation

If 81 State Department loyalty files reveal information on disloyalty, it will be given the public, Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.) promised yesterday.

"You can bet your bottom dollar I will say so," if disloyalty information is contained in the files released to the committee by President Truman, said Tydings, chairman of the investigating subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"And if not, I am going to say that," he told a Chesapeake Associated Press Radio Association meeting here.

Three or four weeks will be required to examine the files, Tydings said, asserting that the inquiry will be a very thorough job and that a public verdict on the committee's work should be withheld until all the evidence is in.

Senator Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) Senate Republican leader, charged President Truman decided to open some of the files to the committee—after having previously refused to do so—because of the transcontinental speaking trip he starts Sunday.

"He did it only because he could not face the people with his arguments for secrecy," said Wherry, who has been picked to deliver the Republican answer to a major farm speech by Mr. Truman Monday in Lincoln, Nebr.

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), whose charges of Communist infiltration into the State Department set off the investigation, kept silence yesterday, saying he is going to "hold my fire" until tonight.

He passed most of the day working on a speech he will make to a Young Republican convention in Chicago tonight which will be carried on a Nation-wide radio network. His spy charges will be its topic, he said.

Boston-Born Aduldet Succeeds Slain Brother as Thailand King

Bankok, May 5 (AP).—Boston-born Phumiphon Aduldet lifted a nine-tiered crown onto his head today and became Rama IX, King of Thailand (Siam).

The booming of 101 guns and weird eastern music peeling from trumpets told Thailand's 18 million subjects their 22-year-old monarch had assumed his royal station.

The ceremony began with the traditional sacred bath. Phumiphon dipped himself into waters gathered from all parts of his storybook kingdom.

While Phumiphon donned his coronation garments, the royal astrologers worshiped his majesty's guiding stars.

Later he read a command raising his bride of one week, Strikit, to Queen of Thailand.

Thailand at last had a new King, successor to his brother, Ananda Mahidol, who was mysteriously slaim four years ago. But Rama IX plans to leave soon with his bride to resume studies in Switzerland.

News of POWs Stuns, Angers West Germans

Bonn, Germany, May 5 (AP).—Anti-Communist feeling surged across West Germany today as the stunned populace realized the full import of Russia's announcement that all German war prisoners have been returned.

Chancellor Konrad Adenauer bitterly charged that 1,500,000 Germans — including "tens of thousands of deported civilians"—are still missing in the Soviet Union. He demanded, in the name of humanity, that the Kremlin account for their fate. The Chancellor made a special appearance before the West German Parliament.

U. S. High Commissioner John J. McCloy declared at his Frankfurt headquarters that Russia has failed to account for "many hundreds of thousands of German prisoners of war."

"I think the world should know what happened to them and to the many thousands of German civilians who also disappeared into the Soviet Union," McCloy said.

U. S. officials in Frankfurt said McCloy and U. S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson will discuss the German war prisoner situation when they meet in Paris Sunday.

State Department officials in Washington labelled Russia's announcement, made last night through the Tass news agency, "fantastic and absurd." They estimated the Soviets are still holding "at least" 200,000 German troops in forced labor and prisoner of war camps.

Tass said the last group of war prisoners—17,538 of them—had been returned to Germany. Adenauer used Soviet figures to support his declaration that 1,500,000 are missing.

The chancellor said that in 1945 Tass reported 3,500,000 Germans held in Russia. Last night's announcement said 1,939,063 had been repatriated. He said that still leaves more than 1,500,000 unaccounted for.

The announcement plunged hundreds of thousands of German homes into mourning unparalleled since the last days of the war. It also brought forecasts from west German leaders that the Russians had spelled the end of the Communist Party in Germany.

3 Nations Set Protests In Seizures

London, May 5 (U.P.).—Britain, Sweden and Denmark today were reported joining the United States in protesting Russia's attempt to turn the seas off its north European coasts into private lakes by force.

Britain demanded "urgently" that the Soviet Government explain why a Russian warship seized a British fishing trawler in the White Sea.

It was disclosed that Sweden is drafting a note to Moscow protesting the seizure of two Swedish trawlers in the open Baltic.

Copenhagen dispatches said it was understood Denmark is preparing to send a similar formal protest over the disappearance of four Danish trawlers in the Baltic—all undoubtedly seized by the Russians.

Thus, three European countries are aligned with the United States in angry protests that Russian fliers cold-bloodedly shot down a Navy Privateer with its crew of 10, over the open Baltic April 8.

Thought Ship Chinese, Panay Bomber Says

Tokyo, May 5 (AP). — A plane squadron comamnder said today the Japanese attack on the United States gunboat Panay on the Yangtze River in December, 1937, was "a terrible mistake."

Former Navy Comdr. Masatake Okumiya said four Japanese Navy air squadrons thought they were bombing Chinese transports. The ships actually were the Panay, the British gunboat Ladybird, a standard oil tanker and one other vessel. The attack aroused American public opinion.

Egypt Eases Martial Law

Cairo, May 5 (AP).—The Official Journal today published a decree signed April 28 by King Farouk partially lifting martial law imposed at the outbreak of the Palestine war in 1948.

Chinese Reds Reported Shelling Nationalist Base on Tinghai

Hongkong, (Saturday) May 6 (U.P.). The Communists have opened an artillery barage against Tinghai Island, last major Nationalist base outside Formosa, the Central News Agency reported today.

Tinghai, in the Chusan Islands, 90 miles south of Shanghai, is the air and naval base from which the Nationalist blockade of the China coast is being carried out.

The agency said the Communist guns were on Communist-held Kintang (Chintang) island, only 3 miles west of Tinghai. It said the Communists "blindly" shelled Nationalist positions.

10 Millions a Month Asked by Chinese

Taipei, Formosa, May 5 (AP).—Chinese Nationalist spokesmen urgently appealed for new American aid today, contending their Island of Formosa was Asia's best bet to stem the Communist tide.

They addressed their pleas to a party of 21 newsmen brought to Formosa under Nationalist auspices for a special tour.

Declaring that 10 million dollars a month from the United States would meet Nationalist military and economic needs, K. C. Wu, Governor of Formosa, exclaimed, "You're fighting communism—it's no use hiding the truth."

The 10 million dollars, he declared, would be only about 3 percent of what the United States is spending to oppose communism in Europe.

Speaking at a dinner at which he was host, the Princeton-educated Wu declared the French-supported Bao Dai regime in Indo-China was "hopeless" as a bulwark against the Reds.

Nevada 'Hitchhiker' Top U. S. Criminal

Las Vegas, Nev., May 5 (U.P.).—A hitchhiker picked up as a vagrant and burglar suspect was identified today as Stephan William Davenport, listed by the FBI as one of the Nation's 10 "most-wanted criminals."

The convicted murderer and jail-breaker gave his name as Walter Stephen Daniels when he was arrested here in April. When the FBI checked his fingerprints and learned he was wanted, Davenport admitted his identity.

"I've been bumming around the country since I used razor blades last September to saw my way out of a Quincy, Ill., jail," Davenport said.

"I'm glad to get it over with," he told police. "Since my escape, I've been working on farms, staying at one place only a week or two because I was afraid of being recognized."

Davenport was picked up because he fitted the description of a man wanted for a $300 motel burglary. He later was cleared of the burglary.

Davenport was sentenced to 30 days in jail on a vagrancy charge at the request of police who wanted to probe the possibility Davenport was implicated in the burglary. His fingerprints were sent to the FBI.

The FBI has been hunting for Davenport since last September, when he broke out of the Illinois jail where he had been awaiting arraignment on charges of violating the National Motor Vehicle Act.

A long-time lawbreaker, Davenport was sentenced to life imprisonment in 1929 in the murder of an Indiana policeman. He was paroled in April, 1946.

Druggist Recovers—Knife-Wielder Held

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

YOKE VICTIM—Jack Katzoff, 34, 2814 Erie st. se., who was brutally beaten and stabbed Thursday night, is consoled by his daughter, Helen, 3, as he rested at his home yesterday. He recognized his assailant as William Andrew Tyler, jr., 18, of 2302 Pomeroy rd. se.

Lie Test Set For Suspect

block of Alabama ave. se., as he was walking home from the Garfield Pharmacy, 2107 Alabama ave. se., at 10:35 p. m. Thursday.

He said his assailant pressed "something" in his back. Katzoff said he turned partly around and recognized Tyler as a frequenter of the drug store.

The druggist declared he asked the other: "What do you want, Tyler."

He quoted the other as saying:

WILLIAM A. TYLER, Jr.
. . . Faces lie-detector

"You got the wrong guy. Give me your money!"

Katzoff protested he had no money on him.

Then, he declared, Tyler began pounding him with his fists, demanding: "Produce! Produce!"

Katzoff was dragged from the street to the shadowy rear of the Garfield School, 25th st. and Alabama ave. se.

Here his assailant removed Katzoff's belt and tightened it around his victim's neck. He gagged the druggist with one handkerchief and bound his hands with another.

The assailant removed drug store keys from Katzoff's pocket and forced his victim to divulge which would open the front door grating and which the door itself.

Then, Katzoff said, the other again began to beat and choke him viciously, pounding his head on the ground despite Katzoff's pleas that he had a wife and two children.

Finally his assailant sank a sharp object in his back and fled, leaving Katzoff "for dead," as police phrased it.

Katzoff, semi-conscious, crawled to the street. An unidentified passerby saw him and called police. The victim was removed to Gallinger.

Katzoff named his attacker as "Tyler." Detectives recognized the name as that of a man who had been involved in an assault on a girl some time ago.

Eleventh Precinct Detectives Carl A. Rudbeck, jr., and Gordon Colbert, acting on the hunch, went to Tyler's home.

They said he was garbed in clean trousers and shirt but that his rubber-soled sport shoes were muddy. In his room they said they found a wet shirt and trousers, the latter apparently blood-stained.

Police said the ex-porter at Lansburgh's at first denied the stains were blood, but later declared that he had been wrestling with a friend and that the latter had been cut.

Held Significant

The suspect was taken to the Eleventh Precinct station for further questioning and held there overnight.

The arrest was considered so significant in the light of the Lansburgh slayings that Homicide Detective Lieut. Richard Felber, although ill and running a temperature of 101, left his home to take part in the questioning.

Felber is in charge of a special eight-man squad of detectives probing the store murders.

Tyler was arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence and held in $25,000 bond on charges of assault with intent to kill, and robbery with force and violence. His appearance was continued until May 16.

Apparently as a result of the hospital incident, Tyler was doubly handcuffed when brought in for arraignment.

One pair encircled his wrists. A second pair was attached to that pair and then to a single cuff worn by an escorting deputy United States marshal.

A Gallinger doctor said Katzoff's stab wound apparently was caused by a knife. The weapon has not yet been recovered.

The druggist was released from the hospital yesterday afternoon.

It has not been decided where the lie test will be conducted. Both the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Secret Service have such equipment, police said.

a struggle in which Kirkpatrick said the prisoner "showed the strength of a crazy man."

Murphy is conducting microscopic tests of Davis' brain tissues to determine whether the prisoner died of strangulation.

Chemical tests also were being conducted to determine what quantities of what solution was injected into Davis by an intern called by jail guards.

Results of both tests are expected "sometime the first of the week," Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said yesterday.

Second Autopsy Not Needed

Both MacDonald and Murphy have said they have "all of the body we need" to determine the cause of death, and that there was no need for a second autopsy. Murphy has said Davis "did not die of heart disease."

FBI agents continued to press their investigation, and three Homicide Squad detectives spent the day in District Jail interviewing inmates who had seen Davis die or heard the struggle which preceded his death.

Kirkaptrick has been forced to take annual leave for using the towel on Davis, and pending completion of all investigations.

Director of Corrections Donald Clemmer said yesterday that regulations forbid the use of any mechanical restraint on prisoners, except under doctor's orders, Guards are trained in Judo, he said.

The towel used by Kirkpatrick is standard inmate issue, Clemmer said, 38 by 20 inches. He described it as a "regular bath towel."

12 Die, 20 Hurt in Fire

Rio de Janeiro, May 5 (AP).—A bus stalled in a heavy rainstorm caught fire here today, burning 12 persons to death and injuring 20. The driver tried to open the doors, but passengers stampeded and jammed the exit.

Shulman, Drowned Gambler, Heard 'Voices'

gray suit, white shirt, and black and white tie.

Shulman's body lay in the morgue for six hours before it was identified by Beach of 1321 M st. nw., who described himself as a "very close friend."

About midnight Friday, Lieut. Joseph H. Hunt of No. 2 Precinct, received a phone call from an "acquaintance," whom he described as a "friend of Shulman's."

The caller, who had worked with Hunt on a robbery case several years ago when Shulman was severely beaten and robbed of $700 and his car, suggested that Hunt go to the morgue and view the body.

Hunt went there with Lieut. John Layton and Detective Remy Ducote of the homicide squad.

They were met by Beach, who drove up with a woman at the same time. Beach is the former husband of Carmen Beach, notorious rhumba dancer convicted here in 1943 on white slave charges and deported to Spain.

Beach said he was used to talking with Shulman several times a day on the phone. He had not done so all day Thursday, but noticed in the newspaper around midnight that police had found a body. He went to the morgue because the description fitted Shulman, Beach said.

"He just wouldn't go off and stay like that, and we got worried about him," Beach said.

Beach said he talked with the woman at Shulman's home, and she told him Shulman had come home about 7 a.m., apparently without sleep, and told her he was "going for a drive and get something to eat."

Police said the abandoned convertible, in which the note and a $2400 insurance policy were found, is registered in the name of Robert J. Parker, 475 C st. nw., who apparently let Shulman use it.

Several of Shulman's associates agreed he had been "despondent" and "morbid" ever since the death of his wife in 1944. Since last November, he was known to "stare off into space for hours," one friend told a reporter.

It was then that Shulman, the once-prosperous backer of floating dice games, was hijacked by three holdup men in a northeast Washington crap game. Police estimate he lost $17,000.

It was one of a series of such holdups involving Emmitt Warring, Theodore (Little Joe) Scheve and Johnny Williams, all known to police as gamblers.

Police said the crumpled note found early yesterday morning indicated its writer was frightened because of his mental condition. It said he was "ashamed" for causing the woman "all this trouble."

The handwriting was identified as that of Shulman by three friends and his father, Abraham Shulman, 1103 6th st. sw., police reported. It has been turned over to a handwriting expert, however.

Shulman earned the sobriquet of "Ryebread" when he worked for two bakeries here. He became known as "No Odds," according to Beach, at the former gambling establishment of the late Jimmy LaFontaine on Bladensburg rd. at the District line.

"He was willing to bet even money on a roll of the dice when anybody else would get two for one," Beach said.

Shulman was a "cold-blooded" gambler, a free spender who "wanted to bet just as much as the other fellow could stand," Beach told a reporter.

He was not averse to taking a drink, but "never got to the point where he was staggering or didn't know what he was doing."

Many of his friends, including Beach, said they were "surprised" he might have taken his own life.

Shulman was born in Baltimore and came to Washington in 1928. He worked for bakeries until about 1944, the year his wife died.

Since then, his associates say, he hadn't been employed anywhere regularly.

He was a slightly built, dapper man with curly black hair, bushy eyebrows and a swarthy face. About 5 feet 6 inches tall, he weighed 150 pounds.

Rape of Sister Brings Caddy 13-40 Years

Raymond V. Johnson, 21, a caddy, was sentenced yesterday in District Court to serve from 13 to 40 years in prison for raping and robbing his 25-year-old sister at knifepoint.

In imposing sentence, the maximum for the two offenses, Judge Alexander Holtzoff said:

"It is hard to imagine a civilized person committing this crime. You could very easily have gone to the electric chair for it, had the jury recommended death in its verdict."

Robinson was convicted of committing the incestuous rape after he pleaded guilty to robbing the sister, Mrs. Wilhelmina Robinson, 3232 13th st. nw., of money and clothing.

Robinson was represented by court-appointed attorney Charles E. Ford in the case. Ford was commended by the judge for his defense.

In another case, William J. Thomas, 20, address listed as 522 Hayes st. nw., was sentenced to serve from three to 10 years for two burglaries here.

Spencer McGruder, 24, of 1433 W st. nw., received three to nine years by Judge Jennings Bailey for three pocketbook robberies.

Thomas E. Millard, 23, of 28 O st. nw., got 20 months to five years prison for a robbery.

Senate Probe to List Bookies' Who's Who

Senate gambling investigators were assembling names and addresses yesterday for a "who's who" of big-time bookmaking.

Chairman Ernest W. McFarland (D., Ariz.) said his Senate Commerce Subcommittee has started to compile a list which eventually will include all the bigwigs in the bookmaking business.

30 Asked Already

He said about 30 distributors of Racing News already have been asked to advise the subcommittee "where they get their news and who their customers are."

"When we get through," he said, "we will have the name of every big-time bookmaker in the business."

He added that "a lot of small fry" will not be included because the subcommittee has no way of finding operators who do not depend on instantaneous "flash" information of racing results.

McFarland said the Racing News distributors have been asked to comply with his subcommittee's request voluntarily. If any refuse to cooperate, he said, the subcommittee will not hesitate to issue subpenas.

17 "Phantom" Services

Distributors who have been asked to name their customers include most clients of the Continental Press Service. Also contacted, McFarland said, were 17 "phantom" services not listed as clients of Continental but identified by Western Union as operators of leased racing wires.

McFarland was unable to say when the list will be completed.

The subcommittee recessed its hearings indefinitely Thursday after hearing Tano Lococo and Eddie "Spitz" Osadchey—Kansas City operators of Standard News Service. They testified that Standard received its race news from General News Service in Chicago, listed among the subcommittee's "phantoms."

Their testimony convinced Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) that Continental spokesmen were "playing ducks and drakes" with the subcommittee. He demanded that Continental executives be recalled so subcommittee members can "put some pressure" on them.

Meanwhile, a manufacturer of slot machines told Congress yesterday that slot players can't win.

But Herbert Jones, president of the American Coin Machine Association, said the demand for the machines is so great that it would be impossible to enforce a Federal law against them.

The proposed law to prohibit gambling machines would "bring back all the evils of prohibition days," Jones told the House Commerce Committee considering the legislation.

Jones said his company's machines, popularly known as "one-armed bandits," are rigged to make a profit from 10 to 25 percent. He didn't think it was "exorbitant" for people's amusement.

The machine's are illegal in 43 States but, he said, "there is a public demand for them."

Crime Fight Up to Cities, Expert Says

Boston, May 5 (AP).—Virgil W. Peterson, director of the Chicago Crime Commission, says the underworld has "more power than the Government in virtually every large municipality in the Nation.

Speaking at a dinner sponsored by several civic groups last night, Peterson said:

"The power and influence of the underworld in American political life at almost every level cannot be denied by anyone willing to view the facts."

He said efforts to enact new Federal laws to assist in curbing the power of criminal syndicates that operate in interstate commerce are both "desirable and necessary."

"But," he said, "primarily the fight must be waged at the level of local government. This responsibility cannot be passed on."

The crime specialist said that Charles Binaggio, slain last month in Kansas City, exercised political power in Missouri "exceeded only by that of the Governor."

"So powerful had he become," Peterson said, "that in recent campaigns candidates who were not allied with him did not have the courage to repudiate him."

He said that Binaggio's influence "was felt in the Police Department, the Board of Election Commissioners, the sheriff's office, the prosecutor's office, the Senate and House of Representatives and the judiciary.

"Even the Governor was obligated to listen to him," Peterson added, "in making appointments that affected the law enforcement of the State."

He said there are counterparts of Binaggio "in virtually every large municipality in the Nation."

"In a number of large municipalities," he said, "the balance of political power is vested in gambling and racketeering syndicates. By making large campaign contributions and furnishing numerous workers toward the election of officials friendly to them they are thus in a position to have a strong voice in the law enforcement policies of a city or a State."

Hogan Seeking Accountant For Erickson

New York, May 5 (NYHT).—Frank Erickson's accountant "is missing and is very much wanted," District Attorney Frank S. Hogan announced tonight after "six reputable businessmen," one of whom bet up to $10,000 a day with the bookmaker, were questioned by Hogan's aides.

The certified public accountant is Henry Pellino, 49, also known as Harry and Andy. He and his wife have been missing since Monday morning from their home in Greenwich Village. They took considerable luggage with them. Neighbors said they were "on vacation."

They departed almost at the moment that accountants from Hogan's office were examining Erickson's bank accounts and 24 hours before Hogan's detectives raided Erickson's office. The detectives loaded a two-ton truck with documents from Erickson's files.

Brother's Name on Door

Erickson's office, consisting of three air-conditioned rooms on Park ave., has the names Henry Pellino and Leonard J. Erickson on it. The latter is Erickson's brother and when Alfred J. Scotti, assistant district attorney in charge of the rackets bureau, was asked if Leonard Erickson was also being sought for questioning, Scotti replied:

"Our interest in him is held in abeyance."

On Thursday, when a New York County grand jury inquiry into Erickson's activities began, Harry Richards, 62, described as an Erickson "dummy" at $70 a week, was held in a whopping $100,000 bail as a material witness.

In asking that that huge sum be set, Vincent A. G. O'Connor, as Leonard $20,000 a year "just to been quietly investigating Erickson for a year, told Judge John A. Mullen in General Sessions that "underworld figures connected with Erickson" would be delighted if Richards disappeared. Richards is in jail.

Other "Associates" Sought

In addition to Pellino, other Erickson "associates"—unidentified—were being sought by Hogan's detective squad.

The names of the six men questioned today by Hogan's accountants were kept secret. But they were described as being in various types of business, including "investments," all reputedly legitimate.

All were horse plungers and one of the six bet as much as $10,000 a day. The others placed bets ranging from "hundreds of dollars a day to thousands of dollars a day."

Ten more big businessmen who bet equally large sums with Erickson will be questioned by Hogan's office.

Group Asks U. S. Aid In Air-Pollution Fight

The first Government-sponsored conference on air-pollution problems ended here yesterday with the recommendation that the Government set up an advisory council on air pollution.

The recommendation was passed by an easy majority, but only after the voiced protest from a delegate that the conference was called solely for that purpose.

"Don't be a party to such a scheme," pleaded R. W. Coward, of Birmingham, Ala., who described himself as a "tax expert" and said he represented the Fly-Ash Arrester Corp., of that city.

Coward, sole objector to seek the floor, said he saw no need for "another Government bureau, more jobs and more of the taxpayers' money" to handle air-pollution problems. Industry, he said, spent $200 to $300 million last year without Federal direction on air-pollution projects.

When the vote was taken, and only a few negative votes were recorded, he turned to reporters and complained:

"See. They waited till all the out-of-town boys had left and only the Government boys are here."

The resolution was recommended by the conference steering committee, an 11-man body of industry and Government representatives chosen only yesterday morning to speed the fight on air pollution in industrial cities and towns.

The resolution asked that the Government "continue its interest and support in solving air-pollution problems and that an advisory council on air pollution be created, composed of representatives of research and educational institutions, industry and appropriate agencies of Federal, State and local governments."

Top Honors In Safety Go To Arlington

Arlington County yesterday won first place among urban areas of its size in the National Safety Council's 1949 safety contest.

The award for the county's overall safety program was won in competition with about 50 cities in the 100,000 to 200,000 population group, according to Clifton G. Stoneburner, country traffic engineer.

The award was based on safety accomplishments of the police and highway departments, courts, and commonwealth attorney's office, plus the safety efforts of schools, newspapers and radio stations.

Arlington won second place last year in the 100,000 to 200,000 population group, and in 1943, was first in safety among cities in the 50,000 to 100,000 population group.

Besides its first this year in the field of general traffic safety, the county received another first prize for "outstanding achievement" in the field of traffic engineering.

Top honors in the Nation-wide contest were split between Oklahoma City and Lansing, Mich., which reduced their death rates by 41 and 77 percent respectively from the previous three-year average.

Grand award among the 48 States went to Connecticut.

Potomac River Commission Is All for Park and Planning Group Expansion—But With an 'If'

The Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin yesterday gave conditional indorsement to pending legislation to expand the authority of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The action came at the closing session of a two-day spring meeting in Alexandria. The commission said NCPPC power should be expanded, but only if the group consults with "interstate commissions" in affected areas before developing regional plans. It also urged that NCPPC be required to consult local authorities in the expanded area before taking action.

Under separate measures pending before both the House and Senate, the planning commission's authority would be extended from the present Greater Washington area to Virginia and Maryland communities within a 50-mile radius of the District.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Oliver Gasch, a District member of the commission, said inclusion of "all interstate commissions" in the proposed amendment would bring the Potomac River Basin group into consultation with NCPPC before any regional plan would be developed in the expanded areas.

During yesterday's meeting, the commission learned that the Potomac River is among 10 American streams chosen for "guinea pig" river basin development by the President's Commission on Water Resources.

This came to light when the group's land committee reported it had been asked to file a brief with the Water Policy Commission, outlining its recommendations for development of the Potomac Basin area. The commission authorized the land committee to forward the brief.

The commission agreed to hold its September meeting "in or near" Cumberland, Md.

Who Gives The Signals?

In one incontrovertible statement in an otherwise evasive performance, Mr. Frank Costello told the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee the other day that a gambler can't operate "unless you get the green light somewhere." The House District Subcommittee investigating crime in Washington has acknowledged that there is extensive illegal gambling here; United States Attorney Fay estimated some time ago that the take was $100 million a year. The next question, made the more pertinent by the discovery of the body of a local "big shot" gambler in the Potomac, is: Who are the authorities that have given the green light to gamblers in Washington?

Signs Of Inflation

Sporadic increases in prices of quite a number of so-called sensitive commodities have revived talk of inflation. Even the slow-moving BLS wholesale price index which has remained quite stable for some time advanced 1 percent during the week ended April 25. These price changes come at a time when business is booming, steel shortages are again beginning to appear, and prices of steel scrap—an especially sensitive indicator of price trends—have been rising sharply. Employment, too, has picked up more rapidly than expected and, with more people employed, effective consumer demands will increase and tend to raise prices.

To be sure, not all prices are rising, and price increases resulting from goods shortages or fears of shortages are not necessarily evidences of inflation. Moreover, many industries are operating at or near capacity turning out a huge volume of goods. And as the supply of goods increases, competition among sellers becomes more active, tending to prevent price increases.

There are, however, certain inflationary influences at work that are causing some worry to business forecasters. Government deficit financing is steadily pumping money into circulation. In addition, there is the veterans' insurance refund which has already put about $2.8 billion in the hands of consumers as well as the continuing rapid expansion of consumer credit. At the end of March, for instance, the amount of consumer credit outstanding was nearly $3 billion above the level of a year ago, while installment credit had reached record heights. Thus purchasing power, sustained by high employment and high wages, is being steadily augmented by increases in the amount of borrowed money in the hands of consumers. A good deal of that borrowed money is being used to finance purchases of automobiles, household appliances, and furniture. Defense spending and housing loans also increase the public's buying power and put pressure on the prices of many commodities.

No doubt, therefore, inflationary forces are having an effect on prices, although great differences of opinion exist as to whether they will gain the upper hand and be reflected in a further and sustained general rise in prices. The prices of the future depend upon too many unpredictable factors to justify indulgence in prophecy.

Judges As Witnesses

The committee appointed by the American Bar Association to inquire into the propriety of judges testifying in criminal and civil cases was not able to agree upon any change in the law, but the facts it brought to light are stimulating further discussion of this interesting problem. The committee found that the present law requires a Federal judge to disqualify himself from presiding in any case in which he is to testify. Otherwise judges may be subpenaed and compelled to testify on the same footing as other witnesses. The committee also notes that "a judge is as competent and compellable to testify as to reputation as he is to testify to any other material fact." Judges thus subpenaed, the committee concluded, should not be criticized for doing what they must do, but the committee feels that it would be wiser in all cases for judges not to appear as witnesses unless subpenaed.

The danger the committee sees in the use of judges as character witnesses is virtually the same as that pointed out on this page when Justices Reed and Frankfurter testified in the first Alger Hiss trial. The report says:

> Although evidence as to reputation does not in any true sense represent the personal opinion of the witness as to the character of the person involved, the public and juries may regard it as such and gain the impression that the judge testifying to character is vouching for the person involved. This is definitely so in criminal prosecutions. To the public such instances may give the impression that the judge who testifies has become a partisan and is stepping down from his lofty position to vouch for the accused and lend the weight of his position to testimony which indicates his personal judgment that the accused is not the sort of person who would commit the offense charged.

An appellate judge who so testifies is disqualified by law from sitting on the case if it reaches his court on appeal. Even so, the committee fears that the brethren of such a judge may suffer some embarrassment if the record shows that he has vouched for the accused in the court below. Certainly, then, the demands upon judges as character witnesses should be reduced to a minimum.

None of the committee members thinks judges should be flatly forbidden to give character testimony. Chairman William D. Mitchell concluded the law should be left as it now stands until there is further evidence that a change is desirable. Judge Kimbrough Stone said the law might well be changed so as to deny compulsory process upon a judge, except by order of the trial judge upon determination that such evidence is not otherwise available or is necessary for a fair trial of the accused. The weight of opinion is against further legislation on the subject and certainly against use of judges as character witnesses, whenever it is avoidable.

Mr. Acheson's Mission

Secretary Acheson, who leaves for Europe today, will bear a heavy burden on his shoulders. Europe seems to be in a state of mind of a person who sees no objective reason for imminent war but who feels that Russian or American blundering may at any moment precipitate it. On this assumption the astute Swiss are taking out insurance. After looking more or less serenely on the international scene for the five peace years, the government, even at the risk of losing its summer tourist business, has requested the people to follow the government's stockpiling example and hoard food and raw materials, just as it did in 1939.

This has created a sinking feeling among the impressionable French. They are much more likely to be influenced by this development than by either Mr. Trygve Lie's peace visit to Moscow or Mr. Truman's optimistic assurance that next year the defense budget could be safely trimmed. Remembering the telephonic congratulations last weekend from Mr. Truman to Mr. Hoover on a speech which was headlined as a suggestion for the breakup of the United Nations, they are likely to shrug off the President's reassuring comment as what they call there a facon de parler, or a way of speaking. The plain fact is that the state of mind, even of the policy-makers, is far worse than in 1946, even though the objective facts are much better. Most influential of these facts, to our mind, is that as long as the schismatic Tito holds out, Moscow would not dare to attack.

All this gloom seems to put the awesome responsibility upon Mr. Acheson of creating a powerful diversion. Men's minds must not be allowed to stay completely bemused by war. It is no doubt for this reason that a week ago Prime Minister Bidault called for "an Atlantic High Council for Peace." The council's task would be "to order and orientate the development of the Atlantic community in the inseparable fields of defense and economics, with the hope of adding the political field before long." The reaction here has not been, to say the least, enthusiastic. Some think of it as a rhetorical flourish, others as the means of dumping the defense of Indo-China into the American lap and of postponing the release of Germany from its servitudes.

The Bidault concept is now said to have more significance than that. It is represented as marking a decided shift in French policy induced by the seriousness of things and the growing development in France and border countries of "neutralism." The neutralists want to bow out of the inter-Titan struggle on the grounds that the European countries are merely pawns in it. Mr. Bidault, anxious to stop this domestic turn no less than the drift in world affairs, is anxious to promote a rearrangement of the Atlantic community which would stress partnership.

Nothing is more desirable, in our opinion, than the promotion of partnership across the Atlantic Ocean. It would serve humanity no less than security. It is the road to a union of the free world that has obtained in this country an influential support from public opinion. To be sure, there is a plethora of agencies which are working on the job of producing a common effort to do common tasks. However, Mr. Bidault may have had in mind the merging and elevation of this activity in some dramatic fashion so as to throw the major emphasis of the Atlantic Pact on Article II requiring solidarity in economic and political relations. Certainly if there were the same zeal and activity in realizing a community as there is in realizing an alliance, the peoples on both sides of the Atlantic would feel the more secure.

No doubt the idea will be explored at the forthcoming meetings of the Foreign Ministers. "Friendship," as President Wilson once said, "calls for machinery," if only in this case to show a determined effort to develop a peace front knit together by a shared sense of responsibility on the part of peoples as well as their governments. Mr. Acheson, we hope, will give the idea in all its ramifications his sympathy, while trying to get from the French a clearer notion of the objectives they have in view for achievement. He seems to think more in terms of policy than in those of institutions. The prime requirement in his mind is to make sure that a North Atlantic policy can be worked out, and that there is enough realization of the need for hanging together to insure loyalty to it. He leaves on his momentous journey with our best wishes for his success.

Amerasia Case

One of the constructive chores that the Tydings Subcommittee can do is to clear up the mystery of the Amerasia case. We hope that its investigation will be impartial and thorough, for there has been a good deal of dissatisfaction among reasonable men about the manner in which this case was handled. There are two aspects to the mystery. The first is why John S. Service, veteran State Department official, was arrested in connection with the case, which involved the possession of top secret documents by the staff of the Amerasia magazine. The second is why the cases of the men whose guilt was established were disposed of so casually.

In the case of Mr. Service, it appears that he was arrested on the word of the FBI, without any knowledge on the part of State Department officials as to the identity of the official suspected. Subsequently a grand jury refused to indict him, and the departmental loyalty board gave him a clean bill of health. Mr. Byrnes and Mr. Grew who were then, respectively, Secretary of State and Undersecretary, congratulated Mr. Service on his exoneration and praised his "splendid record." So far as we know, this judgment remains undisturbed in spite of Senator McCarthy's reckless charges. The only legitimate complaint against Mr. Service, if it can be called legitimate, appears to be that he was prematurely right about foregone conclusions as to what would happen in China.

The second aspect of the case involves the indictments of P. J. Jaffe, publisher and co-editor of Amerasia; Lieut. Andrew Roth of the Office of Naval Intelligence, and E. S. Larsen, State Department specialist on the Far East. The public ought to know why the charges against these men were changed from conspiracy to violate the espionage statutes by stealing highly confidential Government documents to mere conspiracy to remove Government records illegally. Why was Jaffe, convicted in a brief and almost unnoticed trial, let off with a fine of $2500? Why was Larsen, who pleaded no defense, fined only $500? Why was the indictment against Roth dismissed? Was all the evidence available to the Department of Justice presented against these men? What methods had been used to extract secret documents from the files of the State, War and Navy Departments, the OSS, and the Office of War Information?

It is true that a House Judiciary Subcommittee spent a good deal of time looking into the case in 1946. But it left many questions unanswered. The time has come for a full exploration of the facts. The difficult problem will be to get all the essential facts into the hands of the subcommittee without revealing the sources of FBI information. But the FBI may be willing to give the Tydings Subcommittee a summary of the data in its files, as it did in the case of Mr. Lattimore and as it does with the Loyalty Review Board.

DP Exclusions

In the general satisfaction over the Senate's adoption of Senator Kilgore's displaced persons bill instead of Senator McCarran's, one rather serious defect was overlooked. In the main, the Senate version is now very close to that passed by the House. But the Senate included one provision not contained in the House bill that seems to us most unfortunate in its phraseology. We hope that the view of the House will prevail when the measure goes to conference.

The Kilgore bill as passed by the Senate would bar from admission to the United States "any person who is or has been a member of the Communist Party." The first half of this provision included in the House bill and earlier immigration laws, seems to us altogether unexceptionable. There is no reason why the United States should grant asylum to enemies of our form of government. At the same time there is no reason to deny asylum to a person who has genuinely embraced democratic principles simply because he once made the mistake of joining the Communist Party. Repentant former Communists—if they do not make a profession out of their repentance—may be valuable citizens and useful recruits in the struggle against totalitarianism.

The Kilgore bill is even more sweeping, however. It closes the door not only to former Communists but also to anyone who adheres to "the principles of any political and economic system or philosophy directed toward the destruction of free competitive enterprise." It is difficult to believe that this provision was intended to mean what it seems to say. It could well be interpreted as barring the admission of such persons as Paul Spaak of Belgium or President Auriol of France or any member of Britain's Labor government. We have no need to fear immigrants who may seek changes in our economic system by lawful and peaceful means; the system has quite enough vitality to allow them to be heard. It is sufficient to bar advocates of change by force or violence.

THE JEWEL

Out of the core of this deep-seething fire,
From molten elements a gem is born;
Earth's treasures are all barren and forlorn
Beside this jewel of my great desire.
Thus do I know fulfillment, rich attire
Is mine; now gladly, gladly am I shorn
Of lesser gems wherewith I might adorn
Myself, and thus toward beauty might conspire.
Now am I lighted with a radiant flame,
Yielding a matchless glory all its own;
More than the star-girt sapphire could impart
More than the earth-bound diamond could claim,
For all their gleaming splendor is but stone—
My jewel is your love within my heart!

Helping The Commies

Today we have many reformed Communists in our midst and to prove their "change of heart" they have exposed Communists in this country. But what better way for Stalin to get his real Red agents in this country into places of trust than by just such a "secret weapon"?

Note the date of these disclosures. Not five years ago, when so many of our secrets were stolen through laxity in our State Department and other high places in our Government. Not even two years ago—but today. And what is happening today? China has fallen to the Reds. All Asia is threatened by the Red menace. May 28 looms ahead and a threatened active invasion of Europe. What better weapon could Stalin use to distract Americans at home and put obstacles in the way of our efforts abroad to stop Russia, than to create lack of confidence in the men responsible for thwarting Stalin's attempt at world conquest?

For every Communist exposed in this country, Stalin has two to take his place—either wittingly as in the case of disgruntled Americans, or unwittingly as in the case of McCarthy, who is also a tool of the China lobby and unknowingly working for the very people whom he is trying to expose. Oftentimes the innocent are smeared and the guilty still go free. And no amount of investigation ever snares the real culprits.

It is the job of the FBI and other intelligence agents in this country and abroad as well as the Department of Justice to handle the Communist threat. And, until McCarthy opened up on the Hill (not for any deep down patriotism, but to satisfy his own political aspirations) these people were doing a good job. They will continue to do a good job in spite of the lobbyists and Congressmen on the Hill who are more concerned over politics and political wrangling than doing their rightful job. Let's set our Government in order at home, putting things in their rightful places, then perhaps we can forestall Stalin. Charles Evans Hughes once said, "The enemy of this country is not to be found in any foreign power. We, its people, are its evil, its power and its hope." Today on Capitol Hill we have the example.

Spanish Loan Vote

I was surprised that the Washington press did not record the individual votes of Senators on the proposition to lend Spain a measly 50 million dollars, as a matter of important news. However, I was able to get the record vote without any difficulty from the Senate clerk, and a survey of the vote has thrown me into a state of confusion as to what party suits me best.

It was supposed to be an Administration victory, this vote of 42 to 35, with about 20 of the Senators absent. It was nothing of the kind; the Administration had to rely on many Republican Senators to defeat the Spanish loan.

On the other hand, we find Senators from the South, like Ellender, Eastland, McKellar and Russell, voting for the loan. Also, we had Republicans like Lodge, Taft, Brewster, Bridges, Ferguson, Ives, Hickenlooper and McCarthy voting for the loan, and Republicans, who cannot be accused of friendliness to Truman, voting with his leaders and against the loan. Some of thse are Donnell, Saltonstall, Bricker, Jenner.

I see where Tydings and O'Conor still vote alike, and I am wondering by now which is the dog and which is the tail. The big surprise was the fact that Catholic Senators like Frank Myers, Joseph O'Mahoney and Jim Murray were "among the missing" on this Spanish loan vote, while McMahon, considered a pillar for Catholics in the Senate, voted along Administration lines, against it.

Editorials on Lattimore

Please let me register my appreciation to you for the clarity and sanity of your editorials on the hearings of Dr. Owen Lattimore.

Observant people must be concerned at the increasing deterioration of morale among the people, confused as they are by unsubstantiated charges against such men as Dr. Lattimore.

Dr. Lattimore has been fighting for the rights of all of us—the traditional American right to think and express one's thoughts. The preservation of this right is of utmost importance if we are to preserve our traditional America.

I am grateful for the editorial policy of The Washington Post. By continually bringing us back to facts you help us to keep our balance.

Draft Extension

The proposal to renew the conscription act arouses concern for the safety of American liberties. Conscription is itself a threat to freedom. By interfering with a young man's life at the precise moment when he is beginning to make his career, the Government through conscription prepares the young man to accept and welcome Government interference for the rest of his life.

Can it be that the repeated coincidence of bills for military appropriations or for conscription with excitement over alleged "incidents" or spies is not accidental?

The Armed Services Committee still has a chance of doing a great service to the United States by checking the march to disaster which is being stimulated and led by the armed services.

"U. N. Anniversary"

I am writing to express my appreciation of your splendid editorial of April 25, "U. N. Anniversary."

At a time when agreement on major issues seems to be becoming more and more remote, the more important does it become to try to find agreement on a matter such as the commemoration of April 25, to symbolize that the great cleavage is not irreyocable but may some day be repaired.

Impossibility Of German Neutrality

In many of his recent columns in The Washington Post and in an article in the Atlantic Monthly, Mr. Walter Lippmann has vigorously advanced the theory that certain areas of the world cannot afford to align themselves with either side in the cold war, but must necessarily gravitate toward a policy of neutrality and isolation. Following the example of the United States during its early years, these countries would seek to avoid all entangling alliances.

Although I disagree in general with the idea any nation can seek safety in neutrality at the present time, I shall confine myself here to a discussion of the impossibility of such a policy for Germany. Mr. Lippmann premises his arguments with the sound idea that the German policy of the United States must not be in fundamental conflict with those aspirations which every German, regardless of his political color, may legitimately entertain: a unification of the western and eastern zones, an eventual withdrawal of all occupation forces, a free and prosperous economy, a government elected by the German people, and a full acceptance of Germany into the family of nations.

Mr. Lippmann then jumps to a much shakier premise: thoughtful and responsible German leaders are automatically arriving at the conclusion that Germany, in its present demilitarized state, would make the ideal target for atomic bombing by either side in a new war and that neither the United States nor Russia is capable of guaranteeing Germany protection from the bombs of the other. The only safe course for Germany, therefore, is a middle one which would avoid anything resembling an alliance with either side.

Every country has some men who would like to have their cake and eat it, and Germany probably has more than the average. In exchange for a refusal to ally themselves with the West, they would ask the following concessions from Russia and its satellites: the return of the Oder-Neisse territories; a relaxation of most of the controls which Russia now exercises on east German production; and an opening of eastern Europe, the Soviet Union, and China to German trade.

In exchange for a refusal to ally themselves with Russia, they would ask the following concessions from the Atlantic countries: permission to establish some sort of army; a return of the Saar territory; continued financial assistance, and a relaxation of most of the controls which the West now exercises on West German production. And in payment for their promise to mind their own business they would expect the following concessions from all of the occupying powers acting in concert: a peace treaty; complete unification of all of Germany, including the lost territories; the withdrawal of all occupation forces; and full guaranties that German neutrality would be respected in case of war.

Added to the other prerequisites for German neutrality, therefore, is another which would probably be the most difficult of all: the willingness of East and West to deal with each other in a spirit of mutual trust. If we, for instance, could be certain that a neutral Germany would not go the way of Czechoslovakia, which also hoped at one time to be a bridge between East and West, then we might consider the advantages of negotiating with Russia for German neutrality. But a Russian offer to recognize Germany as a neutral power would be regarded by Western statesmen today as nothing more than a tactical maneuver.

Germany, in my opinion, will never be truly neutral. She may continue indefinitely to vacillate between East and West, waiting until all the offers are in, but eventually she will line up with the side that makes the higher bid. Above all, as the London Economist has pointed out, we must not allow Germany to become a vacuum, for there is absolutely no reason to hope that it will be excepted from the physical law which applies to all vacuums. Something will flow in to fill it, and if not the West it will certainly be the East.

Maytime In A Mad World

By Malvina Lindsay

Solace of Nature

RIDING THROUGH the Maryland countryside you are enveloped in the radiance of May. So much is young, fresh, perfect—leaves, grass, wheatfields, dogwood, redbud, lambs, calves, colts — that you feel yourself in a world that death and destruction can never enter.

Why, you think suddenly, should anyone plunge back into the discord behind? Newsboys will be hawking headlines of a new Russian threat, or of a new terrifying weapon. Excited radio voices will be quoting another general who warns the Soviet has set the date to strike, another statesman who says war is closer than we think. People will be arguing in shrill, angry tones over primary campaigns, over anything that can remotely affect the coming election.

Then there will be the special, grim tension that Maytime this year has brought to the world — the threatened march of Berlin's Communist youth; the meetings of Western foreign ministers in London and Paris; the darkening food situation in some areas; an American Senate hog-tied in an FEPC fight. What a fate for the merry month of May!

HOW NICE it would be to have a retreat in some remote, rural spot and enjoy continuously this beauty, calm, sense of safety. To read nineteenth century novels . . . or Greek philosophers. To investigate the fauna and flora. To reflect objectively on man and his primitive suicidal behavior.

For the first time you think without scorn of those who have told you of buying farms in "the right place" or establishing remote hideaways "in case anything happened." You think particularly of an intelligent woman, a retired college instructor, who explained frankly her plans for emigrating soon to a distant country not likely, in her opinion, to become a battlefield.

"Why not?" she asked. "The world is mad and there is nothing I can do about it. How can I help my country when it is behaving so insanely? We build weapons feverishly as if war were about to break. Our leaders utter warnings that chill our spines. Yet on all sides is business, pleasure, fighting among ourselves as usual. It doesn't make sense. We are doing little or nothing to further peace and nothing really practical in home front defense. Apparently we're too immature to pool our brain power and save ourselves. If it's going to be every fellow for himself, I might as well get busy for Number One."

THINKING of putting the dissension, the Waterloo ball atmosphere behind, you admit things look bad. If we won't stand behind our leaders, if we won't stand by each other—that is, not until the bombs start falling—what chance do we have? Why shouldn't anybody make the most of the time left? Get away from it all. Go back to the solace of nature.

Yet—you think of the isolation, the loneliness. And of the doubtful enjoyment of nature in the raw. And of the eccentricity of persons who live too much apart from their fellows. Above all, of the sense of guilt.

You think again wistfully of what a faraway, calm, safe life would mean to you, to anyone, at this time. . . . Then suddenly there is a pang in your heart. Why you couldn't withdraw from your fellows, no matter how doomed they might be, because you are all a part of each other! To be an amputated member of the society to which you belong would be greater anguish than being maimed by a bomb.

Hadn't religion—of all kinds—long ago glimpsed this? And democracy given it political expression? Now science was groping toward it.

Besides, you tell yourself, there's another side to the picture. If you and your fellows are just deeper densities of the field of unbroken energy modern science talks about, then all of you are closer together than you think. All of you must flow out, in everything you do, say, think to affect others.

The stirring realization strikes you that you are no longer helpless before the chaotic or deterrent forces that threaten to overwhelm the world. Every moment you are putting something into "the field," strengthening one force or another in the unseen battle. Out of this some day could come merrier Mays for everyone.

Goodwill Gesture

During these days of industrial strife, it is pleasing to learn that there are still a few industrial companies that believe in humanity.

A story from the Reading (Pa.) Eagle of April 20 illustrates this fact. It says, in part: "An entire performance of the Ringling Brothers, Barnum & Bailey Circus has been bought out by the Textile Machine Works for its 3700 employes and members of their immediate families when the 'Big Top' comes to Reading early in June. It is believed that this is the first time that an industrial organization has made such an arrangement in the long history of the world's largest circus."

Today this sort of labor-management cooperation rarely exists.

California Race

By Marquis Childs

Boddy's Middle-Road Entry

IF THEY gave medals for political campaigns, one should surely go—win, lose or draw—to the latest candidate to come forward in the California primary race. He is Manchester Boddy, newspaper publisher and columnist, Democratic candidate for the Senate seat to be vacated by Sheridan Downey.

Childs

For 25 years, more or less, Boddy has written a daily column. For 25 years he has expressed himself on practically every subject under the sun. Now he runs for public office and that record is open to the opposition. It would seem to be tempting fate almost too far.

Boddy has an original and inquiring mind. Besides his publishing and writing activities he developed a considerable business growing flowers and shipping them to Eastern markets. He is said at one time to have had the largest camellia ranch in the world which would be par for the course in California.

What Boddy is trying to do in California only someone with a bit of pioneering blood would undertake. As a newcomer to politics, he is trying to steer a middle course between what he feels is the liberal-left wing of the Democratic Party and the ultraconservatism of the Republican Party. In some respects Boddy's problem illustrates the problem of the Democratic Party itself in the coming campaign.

DOWNEY'S prolonged illness compelled him to give up his original intention of running for a third term. But even before that he had jeopardized his position by an interminable war waged with the Bureau of Reclamation. Downey accused Reclamation Commissioner Michael Straus and his assistants of "dictating" the destiny of California's great central valley and the vast power and irrigation projects financed with Federal funds.

When Downey withdrew, the field for the Democratic nomination seemed to be left to Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas. She had been campaigning for weeks in the dynamic style that has attracted large crowds her meetings up and down the length and breadth of the State.

Mrs. Douglas is teamed more or less closely with James Roosevelt, who is running for Governor. They both have the indorsement of CIO unions and at a recent convention of the AFL the Roosevelt-Douglas team was given a cheering reception and the support of most AFL unions. Boddy's friends say he will have the teamsters and other conservative AFL backing.

Boddy's appeal is directed to middle of the road Democrats and Republicans. His literature urges Californians to "vote for a Democrat who can win." There is in this a consciousness of Republican strategy and what Boddy's backers believe is necessary to meet that strategy.

IT SEEMS virtually certain that Representative Richard M. Nixon will capture the Republican senatorial nomination. While under California's curious system of cross-filing a candidate may win both nominations, this is considered unlikely.

Nixon made his reputation largely on his work with the House Un-American Activities Committee in the Eightieth Congress. He persisted in pushing the Alger Hiss case to the point at which Whittaker Chambers made his first disclosures. This led to Hiss' libel suit against Chambers and out of that libel suit came the famous pumpkin papers offered in proof of Chambers' allegations.

At 37 Nixon has an intensity of manner and purpose that bespeak the crusader. He is touring the State in a station wagon equipped with sound apparatus and he speaks from morning until night, sometimes as often as seven or eight times a day.

In the fall campaign Nixon can be expected to use the issue of communism for all it is worth. Conservative Democrats in California believe there is a parallel with Florida. They say that Nixon will exploit every shred of the past that can be used in any way to pin the Red label on Democratic candidates. Boddy, they argue, would in no way be vulnerable to such charges.

But the parallel cannot be pushed too far. Despite certain resemblances in climate and vegetation, California is not Florida. There is a very large labor vote in California besides a considerable number of people who have repeatedly shown their willingness to try radical experiments.

To steer a course between extremes is not easy in a part of the world that runs to the spectacular and the record-breaking. But Candidate Boddy is in there trying for all he is worth.

Holland Fair Opens Campaign To Sell More Goods to U. S.

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, May 5. — Fair royalty walked into a department store here tonight, and with it a sample of the kind of merchandise that may put Europe on its feet.

The Royalty was Bernhard, Prince of the Netherlands, the store was Gimbels and the occasion was the Holland Fair, an exhibit that Marshall Plan officials hope will be a pattern setter and a guide to Europeans to the road of self-support after the Marshall Plan ends.

The merchandise ranges from diamonds cut in Amsterdam down to a 75-cent cheese from Edam. But it is the sort of stuff that will knock eyes out of American buyers and make American producers of luxury items lose sleep of nights.

The fair, a million-dollar effort, is the most ambitious undertaking since the war by a European country to market its products in America.

Accent Is on "Modern"

It challenges no basic American industry, but it injects a strong note of competition in the fine glass, ceramics, silver, pewter, and textile industries. Although the Dutch are reputed to be stolin and phlegmatic, the accent of the fair is on "modern" and the design is that of the day after tomorrow. Most important, the items are priced, packaged and displayed in a way to bring the American customer on the run. If other Marshall Plan countries can follow suit and bring their goods to the United States the way the Dutch propose to do, they will be well on the way to meeting the problem of the "dollar gap."

The fair, previewed here tonight, opens officially tomorrow. It may move on to the other American cities after it closes here June 3, although plans are not yet definite.

For almost two years, ECA Chief Paul G. Hoffman has been telling the Europeans they can and must sell more of their wares in the United States to earn the dollars they need to buy necessities from America. The Holland Fair is the most energetic response to date.

Gala Preview Presented

It was launched with a gala preview tonight. A huge dinner at the Gimbel store for 600 civic, government and business leaders heard Hoffman and Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands terms the exhibit of "incalculable value."

ECA officials have contended that for Europe to sell its goods here, it must learn "salesmanship" merchadising to suit the United States market. The Holland Fair follows this advice. Jointly staged by American merchants and Dutch producers, the goods are displayed with the maximum sales appeal. This is in contrast to most previous attempts, where goods were not "plugged" as Americans like to have them, and only diffidently advertised. At tonight's mammoth banquet, three Governors, Dutch Ambassador Van Kleffens, Pennsylvania's Senator Myers, Philadelphia's Mayor Samuel and Gimbel officials joined in welcoming the prince and the fair.

In his speech, Hoffman said that besides the immediate commercial value of the sales enterprise, the exhibits indicate to the Europeans "that they can sell in America, tariffs and customs procedures notwithstanding. Events of this sort demonstrate to Americans that purchase of foreign goods can be fun, no less than the plain duty of a creditor nation."

No Threat to United States

To relieve any American fears of disastrous competition from Europe, Hoffman stated that at best, Europe could not possibly export to the United States in any single year in the forseeable future more than 1¼ billion dollars worth of "competitive goods." This is only nine tenths of 1 percent of the goods produced in America.

But, Hoffman warned, the Europeans must sell to the U. S. about 400 million dollars worth of goods more than they do at present to become "cash on the barrelhead customers" for the vital American goods that Europe must have. These are principally agricultural products, tools and machines, now being supplied as virtual gifts through the Marshall Plan.

In his reply, Prince Bernhard said the exhibition aims to contribute to the finding of "a real solution for the European and hence the Dutch dollar problem."

If that problem is not solved along the lines of increased exports for dollars, he predicted, "Europe will be forced . . . to curtail its purchases in the dollar area to such an extent as to threaten important parts of the world with economic isolation. I hardly need stress that this would have far-reaching consequences for Europe as well as the American continent.

Montgomery Schools Seek Record Sum

A record budget of $5,839,934, of which the county would contribute $4,452,839, has been presented to the Montgomery County Council by the board of education.

The State will be asked to provide $1,387,095.

The county portion of the budget is $860,438 more than this year's levy provided and would mean a 25-cent increase in the present tax rate of $1.90 per $100 if the entire budget is granted.

The 1949-50 budget was $4,717,223, which was $1,122,711 less than the budget asked for 1950-51. The State contributed $1,124,822 last year

Mrs. Durward V. Sandifer, president of the school board, in an accompanying letter, pointed out to the council that the amounts requested show "a normal increase in the cost of education."

"The schools should make normal, reasonable advance," Mrs. Sandifer wrote. "The budget should provide for such progress. The school officials feel that the budget requests are in terms of reasonable progress."

Next year's enrollment is expected to increase approximately 4000, and 126 new teachers have been provided for in the budget at a cost of $378,000. In addition, the board asks $106,000 for the first half of a two-year program of placing teachers on the approved salary schedule. An additional $90,000 would be required to place all teachers on the approved schedule this next year, Mrs. Sandifer stated.

The budget estimates operating costs at $528,170, an increase of $105,170 over the present $423,000 appropriation. Maintenance requests amout to $305,000 or a $75,000 increase. It also provides an appropriation of $44,000 for clerks, stenographers and office personnel, $7000 more than the present budget.

Other major requests are:

General control, $162,833; instructional service, $4,356,748; transportation of pupils, $366,200; auxiliary agencies, $76,283; fixed charges, $44,700. All figures mark increases over this year.

4 Principals Transferred by Prince Georges

Transfer of four school principals and appointment of three others were announced yesterday by the Prince Georges County Board of Education.

In addition, Victor Parker, principal of Ardmore Elementary School, was made a visiting teacher.

Principals transferred, according to William S. Schmidt, director of instruction and assistant to the superintendent of schools, were as follows:

Mrs. Louise P. Hemp, Mount Rainier Elementary to Thomas S. Stone School, Mount Rainier-Brentwood; Miss Elizabeth McMahon, Colmar Manor Elementary to Mount Rainier; Richard Brown, Lakeland Elementary to Highland Park Elementary, and William Gray, Westwood Junior High to Lincoln Elementary.

New principals are Mrs. Mildred I. Parker, Berwyn Heights Elementary teacher promoted to principal of Langley Park Elementary; Miss Rita Dawson, Lyndon Hill Junior High teacher, to Colmar Manor principal, and Tilden Lawlis, Riverdale Elementary teacher, to principal of Ardmore Elementary.

Downey Leaves Bethesda Hospital

Senator Downey (D., Calif.) has left Bethesda Naval Hospital after a six-week illness and gone to the Atlantic coast to recuperate.

His office yesterday would not say where he has gone.

He was treated for stomach ulcers.

Wedding Bells Near

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

GLAMOUR BRIDE—Film Star Elizabeth Taylor and hotel heir Conrad (Nick) Hilton, jr., pause outside the Roman Catholic Church of the Good Shepherd in Beverly Hills, Calif., following their wedding rehearsal yesterday. Luscious Liz was ordered to bed by her doctor shortly after the rehearsal suffering from a chest cold, but she insisted that the wedding will come off as scheduled today "even if I have a temperature of 104." The beautiful film star has chosen a gown of white, pure silk satin. The hem is bordered with seed pearls and satin-lined bugle beads. It will be worn over a full organdie petticoat made of small ruffles. She will carry a bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley

Virginia Pupils Below Average In Achievement

Richmond, Va., May 5 (AP).—Just how well do Virginia school children learn their three "R"?

The State Board of Education has given tests to the pupils and here are some of the general conclusions these tests suggest:

1. White pupils have shown an achievement just a shade below the national average, but the achievement of Negro pupils is considerably below that of whites, reflecting a lower academic ability as measured by the tests.

2. Both groups have shown an appreciable advancement in tests given in recent years over those of 1919.

The results of the tests were released yesterday by Alfred L. Wingo, department supervisor of research.

"All our tests have shown," Wingo said, "that the Negro pupils start out close to the whites, but that where the white achievement curve rises sharply after the fourth or fifth grade, the Negro achievement curve goes up much more slowly."

Wingo added that a comparison of mental age with educational age in the same test results showed that Negro pupils do better with what they have than whites.

Tests given seventh-grade children showed city white children were five months over-age for their grades and rural white children six months over age.

On the same tests, Negro pupils made scores equal to what children half way through the fifth grade should make.

vote, aroused Senators rapped France over the knuckles for her alleged unfair and discriminatory treatment of American businessmen in French Morocco.

The rebuke took the form of an amendment denying the use of the so-called counterpart funds to any country getting Marshall Plan aid "so long as any dependent area of such country fails to comply with any treaty between the United States and such dependent area."

The counterpart funds are local currency which every recipient of Marshall Plan aid must set aside in amounts equivalent to the amount of its free grants from the United States. These local funds are then used for productive or anti-inflationary purposes with the approval of the Economic Cooperation Administration here.

The Morocco vote was the climax of a long and undiscouraged campaign by a small group of American war veterans who complain that French treatment of them vilates an American treaty with Morocco, a French dependency.

France Disputes Charge

The State Department has made little headway in negotiations on this issue. The French insist that Morocco is subject to French laws and that they are not, in fact, discriminating against the Americans. The amendment cutting off the counterpart funds now goes to a Senate-House conference, with little prospect of approval there.

The real test, of course, came on the efforts to cut the amount of the bill. Senators Taft (R., Ohio) and Millikin (R., Colo.) led the fight and held most of their party colleagues with them.

This time there was no Senator Vandenberg on the floor to rally Republican support for the bill. Senator Lodge (Mass.) tried to persuade his colleagues of the dangers in the world situation, and he had occasional help from Senator Smith (N. J.).

But in general the Republican assault on foreign aid was more determined and came closer to success than in past years. The Democrats, led by Senator Connally (D., Tex.), were always on call in big enough numbers to beat back the opposition and to keep the bill virtually intact.

First Floor Skirmish

The first of the day's floor fights was just a skirmish, an attempt by Senator Kem to lop a billion off the Marshall Plan figure. The attempt failed by 62 to 17.

But Taft was in earnest when he offered his own amendment to cut half a billion. He warned that without this cut there would be no way of saving anything on domestic programs. In the 40-40 vote that followed, he had the support of Senators Knowland (Calif.), Ives (N. Y.), Smith (Me.), Wiley (Wis.), and others who had seldom, if ever, voted for cutting foreign aid programs.

Nine Democrats who voted with Taft were Ellender (La.), Frear (Del.), George (Ga.), Johnson (Colo.), Johnston (S. C.), Maybank (S. C.), McClelland (Ark.), Russell (Ga.) and Stennis (Miss.).

Four New England Republicans —Aiken (Vt.), Flanders (Vt.), Lodge (Mass.), and Saltonstall (Mass.)—and two others, Smith (N. J.) and Thye (Minn.) voted against the 500 million cut.

Under the Senate rules a tie vote on an amendment is lost; therefore Taft's 40-40 vote was a failure, and the economizers had to try again. This time Senator Bridges (R., N. H.) led them, and this time he had 14 Democrats on his side in favor of a cut of 250 million.

Only 3 Republicans Against

Only three Republicans—Flanders, Lodge and Smith (N. J.)—voted against the 250-million reduction; the roll-call on Bridges' amendment was 47 to 33.

This was the last attempt of the day to cut the Marshall Plan. A succession of roll calls resulted in heavy votes against amendments that would have put new restrictions on Paul Hoffman, the ECA administrator.

The one that came closest to success was an effort by Bridges to compel the labeling of all American supplies sent abroad under the Marshall Plan. He wanted to forbid ECA to pay any supplier without first getting an affidavit that the labeling requirements had been obeyed. The Senate voted him down by 39 to 37.

Finally, late in the day, the controversial Point Four program of technical aid came up for a vote. The House had cut this request from 45 million to 25 million; the Senate Foreign Relations Committee had deleted a mass of House-approved language dealing with private investments.

Millikin Tries Side-Tracking

Senator Millikin proposed side-tracking the program until a bipartisan commission had made a thorough study of it. His plan was rejected, 42 to 33. When Connally's own amendment came up, adding the Point Four program to the foreign aid bill, Taft made a fervent appeal to the Senate not to vote "another international program."

"This is opening a new field for spreading Government money around the world," he warned. Senator McKellar (D., Tenn.), chairman of the Appropriations Committee, objected on the ground of cost.

"Where are we going to get the money?" he wanted to know.

"We'll get it out of the Appropriations Committee," Connally retorted.

"I'm opposed to it here and I'll oppose it in the Appropriations Committee," McKellar answered. "We're going mad, we're going wild."

Senators McMahon (Conn.) and Humphrey (Minn.) led the fight for Point Four, and in the end they won by a one-vote margin. Ten Southern Democrats voted against it; three Republicans, Ives (N. Y.), Lodge and Smith (Me.) were for it.

Toward the end of their long day the Senators, in kindly mood, voted two minor amendments to relieve suffering abroad, even in Communist areas. One of them earmarked up to 10 percent of the unspent Formosa-China funds for "humanitarian aid" in China, to be administered by the American Red Cross.

The other, sponsored by a bipartisan group against State Department objections, extended for another year the authorization of an American contribution to the International Children's Emergency Fund of the United Nations. Last year 100 million dollars was authorized for this purpose, but only 75 million was appropriated.

Danville Man Gets Fairfax School Post

Appointment of W. Harold Ford of Danville, Va., as supervisor of elementary schools for Fairfax County, was anounced yesterday by School Superintendent W. T. Woodson.

Ford, appointed for the 1950-51 session, will assume his duties July 1, Woodson said.

A native of Pittsylvania County, Ford has been supervisor of elementary schools in Danville for the last three years. Before his teaching duties were interrupted by Army service in 1942, he was principal of a Danville elementary school for five years.

After discharge from the Army as a first lientenant, he was employed by the State Department of Education as an assistant supervisor of veterans training for about six months before becoming elementary supervisor in Danville.

German Gridders Pelted, Called Nazi In N. Y. Welcome

New York, May 5 (U.P.).—Sixteen German soccer players were pelted with ripe fruits and vegetables today as they posed for photographs on the City Hall steps.

The missles were hurled by a score of young men and women who described themselves as Zionists. Three of the demonstrators, two of them students at Brooklyn College and the other from City College, were arrested.

The demonstrators carried placards denouncing the footballers, and chanted "Go back to Germany, you lousy Nazis, you murderers."

The players, members of the Hamburg Sport Verein, arrived by plane last night to play a series of soccer matches in the United States.

Church Music Expert To Lead D. C. Choirs

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

Too many churches think of music as entertainment instead of part of the worship service, according to Dr. John Finley Williamson, veteran choir director.

Dr. Williamson is president and founder of Westminster Choir College, Princeton, N. J.

He has been in Washington during the past week to lead a school of church music for conductors and choirs sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches.

Sunday at 5 p. m. he will direct choirs from many of the city's churches in a choral festival at the Sylvan Theater on the grounds of the Washington Monument. In case of rain the service will be at Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw.

Good church music should be a "magic link with God" that builds a worship experience in the hearer, Dr. Williamson said. The type of music to be used in different churches depends on the church and its congregations, he said, pointing out that "what's good for one congregation is not for another."

In America today there is a growing interest in church music, although "the average church choir is still the average church choir," he said.

An increasing number of churches are calling for trained choir leaders, although the program to train such directors is still "very young and very inadequate," he said.

Westminster, which trains men and women for the position of "minister of music," has calls for 700 such ministers each year and can supply only about 45.

Leadership is the most important factor in producing good church music, Dr. Williamson said. "A good leader always has good material. It has nothing to do with talent. A good leader makes his talent good, a great leader makes great talent."

In choosing students for the school, Dr. Williamson places character, personality and mentality first on the list of qualifications, voice last.

In spite of the growing interest, composers are writing little new church music, Dr. Williamson said. One reason for this, he said, is that in the past most musicians were trained in the church; today they are trained "every place else but in the church."

"If music is to take its rightful place as an art, it must have the spiritual influence every art needs," he declared.

2 Methodist Churches Plan Merger June 1

Lincoln Road and McKendree Methodist churches expect to become one united church on June 1.

Plans for merger of the two churches were completed at congregational meetings this week.

The merger was requested by Lincoln Road church after a congregational meeting early in the winter defeated a plan to re-locate the church in the suburbs.

Lincoln Road church, Lincoln Road and Rhode Island ave. ne., is in a changing neighborhood and found that many of its members lived some distance from the church.

Services to Continue

Services will be continued at the church until the official board decides the church is to be closed and all activities held in McKendree, South Dakota and Rhode Island aves. ne. Eventually, the building will be sold, and funds from the sale used by the united church.

Merger of organizations of the church will take place gradually, but after June 1 the churches will have a single official board and financial activities will be united.

In inviting the Lincoln Road church to merge with it, McKendree announced plans for a $170,000 educational unit which will become a memorial to Lincoln Road church and perpetuate the name of the congregation.

Associate Pastor

Bishop Charles Wesley Flint, resident bishop of the Washington area of the Methodist Church, will be asked to make the Rev. Robert K. Nevitt, pastor of Lincoln Road church, associate pastor of McKendree.

Pastor of McKendree church is the Rev. Dr. Horace E. Cromer.

Lincoln Road church was organized in 1909 and its present building dedicated in 1948. It has a membership of about 550.

McKendree church was founded in 1844 and for many years was at 9th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw. The present church was erected about 10 years ago when Langdon Methodist church merged with McKendree. Membership is 1046.

All Faiths to Observe National Family Week

The week of May 7-14 will be observed as "National Family Week" by members of all faiths.

Plans for Protestant observance of the week in Greater Washington have been under the direction of the Committee on the Christian Home of the Washington Federation of Churches. The committee has arranged an exhibit of materials at the Federation, 1751 N st. nw., and planned a series of radio programs in connection with the observance.

Episcopalians To Convene Here Sunday

The 55th annual convention of the Episcopal Diocese of Washington will open with a service of rededication at the Washington Cathedral at 4 p. m. Sunday.

Clergy from the 90 parishes, missions and congregations of the diocese will join diocesan officials and congregations in the service.

Delegates to the convention, led by the cathedral crucifer, torch bearers and flag bearers will join in an outdoor procession from Bethlehem Chapel into the south transept of the cathedral at 3:45 p. m.

Choirs from 10 churches will leave Bethlehem Chapel at the same time and re-enter the cathedral by the west door.

Participating choirs will be from the following churches: All Saints, Chevy Chase; Ascension, Silver Spring; Atonement Chapel; St. Barnabas, Leeland; St. John's Bethesda; St. Margaret's; St. Mark's; St. Philip's, Anacostia; St. Thomas', and Trinity, Upper Marlboro.

The Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, will preach. Arthur C. Houghton, treasurer of the church's program in the diocese, will read the lesson and heads of diocesan departments will read a special litany.

Following the service, clergy and their wives will be entertained by Bishop and Mrs. Dun at tea at the Bishop's House in the cathedral close.

Sessions of the convention on Monday will be at St. John's Church, Bethesda, beginning with Holy Communion at 8 a. m. The day will conclude with a fellowship dinner at 6 p. m. in the St. John's parish house.

Adas Israel to Hold Cornerstone Rite For Synagogue

Cornerstone laying ceremonies for the new synagogue and school of Adas Israel Congregation will be at 11 a. m. Sunday at Connecticut ave. and Porter st. nw.

Dr. Louis Finkelstein, president of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, will be the speaker.

The $1,250,000 building will take the place of the present synagogue at 6th and I sts. nw.

Completion of the building, which will have a temple seating 1500, children's chapel, assembly hall, and 15 classrooms, is set for late this year.

A plaque on the facade will contain, in relief, a Menorah, the holy candelabrum which is one of the oldest symbols of the Hebrew religion. Its seven candlesticks are taken to symbolize the seven days of Creation, seven continents and seven planets.

The building was designed by Frank Grad & Sons, architects and engineers of Newark, N. J. and Washington. Builder is the M. Cladny Construction Co., Inc., Washington.

Rabbi Solomon H. Metz is spiritual leader of the congregation, Abe Shefferman is executive director and Joseph A. Wilner is president.

Value of Terramycin Shown in Tests Here

Here Today

Cowley Heads Mormons' Conference

Matthew Cowley, one of the 12 apostles of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, will preside at a church missionary conference today at the Washington Chapel, 16th st. and Columbia rd. nw.

Cowley

Cowley, a former secretary to the late Senator Reed Smoot of Utah, lived in Washington from 1922 to 1926. He now lives in Salt Lake City, Mormon headquarters.

During the day he will lead meetings of church elders working in Greater Washington and Baltimore.

At 8 p. m. Cowley will be the speaker at a public meeting at the chapel. The Utah Centennial Chorus, composed of Mormon missionaries, will sing at the meeting.

Washington clinical benefits of the new drug, terramycin, are reported in today's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The drug, its local investigators reported, was found effective against whooping cough, several kinds of pneumonia, syphilis, gonorrhea and other diseases.

The clinical tests were carried on at Freedmen's Hospital, Gallinger Municipal Hospital and the Polk Health Center of the District Health Department.

Tested in 80 Centers

Terramycin, discovered about 9 months ago and isolated from a soil sample, is now being tested in 80 medical research centers and hospitals throughout the country. It already has been favorably compared to aureomycin, effective against a host of infections.

The first of two reports in the Journal concerned studies undertaken at Freedmen's Hospital by staff physicians and investigators of the Federal Food and Drug Administration. Some 30 patients were treated.

Results showed the drug effective against pneumococci and streptococcic pneumonias, urinary-tract infections and whooping cough. Whooping, it was recorded, stopped within 24 hours in one patient and within three days in another.

81 Patients Helped

The Freedmen doctors in the study included Drs. Charles N. Lewis, Eugene A. Clark, jr., John B. Johnson, John B. Lyons, Roland B. Scott, and Paul B. Cornely. FDA representatives included Dr. Ernest Q. King and Henry Welch, Ph. D.

In the District Health Department project, 81 patients were helped, including 73 with ghonnorrhea, six with syphilis, and two with granuloma inguinale, also a venereal disease.

The investigators in the VD project included Drs. F. D. Hendricks, A. B. Greaves, S. Olansky, S. Ross Taggart, C. N. Lewis, G. S. Landman and G. R. MacDonald and Henry Welch, Ph.D., of the FDA and the District Health Department.

Both groups reported some nausea, vomiting, faintness and dizziness by some of the patients, but said the drug was generally well tolerated.

Church and Home Meeting Slated At Westmoreland

"The Church and Home Working Together" will be discussed by Congregationalists at a meeting at 3:15 p. m. Sunday at Westmoreland Congregational Church, Westmoreland cir. nw.

The conference is sponsored by the Washington Area Committee for Education of the Congregational Christian Churches.

Speaker at the afternoon session will be Dr. Nevin C. Harner, vice chairman of the International Council of Religious Education at the Evangelical and Reformed Church seminary at Lancaster, Pa.

At the evening session there will be a panel discussion on the conference theme. Speakers will be Mrs. Paul Hunter of Rock Spring Church, Mrs. Walter Judd of Cleveland Park Church, Roy Roberts of Westmoreland Church, and the Rev. Edward H. Bonsall of Greenbelt Community Church.

Bible Lecture Series To Start Wednesday

A series of lectures on understanding the Bible will be given at St. John's Episcopal Church, Bethesda, on Wednesday evenings at 8 o'clock, beginning this week and continuing through June 28.

Good for Allergies, However

Anti-Histamines Won't Cure Auntie's Cold, Army Says

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

The antihistamines are useless against true cases of the common cold, it was officially reported here yesterday by the Armed Forces Epidemiology Board.

The board's findings, however, did not cover indisputable benefits of the new cold tables for allergic persons suffering from what they believe is a cold.

The report, based on "significantly intensive tests," was issued at the conclusion of the board's two-day annual meeting, at the Army Medical Department's Research and Graduate School, Army Medical Center.

The tests covered clinical research with antihistamines of varying strength, from the prescription-free "cold-stoppers" of drug store sales through the more potent dosages permitted only by a doctor's prescription.

The board, comprising outstanding civilian specialists in all phases of communicable diseases, reported briefly:

"No valid evidence whatsoever that the present antihistamine compounds have any favorable effect on colds or common respiratory infections has been uncovered in experiments sponsored by the Armed Forces Epidemiology Board."

"No benefits from the standpoint of either prevention, reduction of symptoms, or shortening of duration were observed," it concluded.

The full research report is secheduled to be published in this month's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine, said Col. William S. Stone, commandant of the Research and Graduate School and service representative on the board.

The experiment Colonel Stone said, were carried out on civilians and Army Air Force personnel, at Cleveland, Ohio, and at Fort Francis E. Wood, Air Force training base, at Cheyene, Wyo.

In the tests, he explained, persons with known allergies were weeded out. The others, volunteers, were artificially infected with the common cold virus. All were given the virus, but not all were treated with the antihistamine drugs. The rest received similar-looking pills, of no potency.

There was absolutely no significant difference in response from the two groups, he said.

Colonel Stone added that the tests, "by inference," exploded the oft-advertised theory that the common cold itself is an allergic reaction to the body's production of histamine to counteract the cold virus.

"They showed," he stated, "that there is no allergic phase to a cold."

Some doctors have estimated that about one fifth of the persons who complain of frequent colds do not have true colds but suffer apparent colds from sensitivity to pollens or other sources of irritation.

It is these persons, the doctors say, who get relief with use of the new anti-cold pills.

The board's tests were carried out by its Commission on Acute Respiratory Diseases, headed by Dr. John Dingle of Western Reserve University.

Service representatives of the board, beside Colonel Stone, include Capt. R. W. Babione, chief of the Navy Bureau of Surgery's Preventive Medicine Division; Maj. Louis Krassuth of the Air Force Surgeon General's Office Preventive Medicine Division, and Col. Frank Bauer, board administrator, and Chief of the Army Surgeon General's Medical Research and Development Board.

Civilian board members are: Dr. Colin MacLeon, New York University, president; Dr. R. E. Dyer, director of the National Institutes of Health; Dr. E. L. Stebbins, dean and director of the Hygiene and Public Health School, Johns Hopkins University.

Also Dr. W. Barry Wood of Washington University, Dr. L. T. Coggeshall, dean of the biological sciences, University of Chicago; Dr. Thomas Rivers of the Rockefeller Foundation Hospital for Medical Research, and Dr. James A. Simmons, dean of the Public Health School of Harvard University.

U. S. Court Orders Lustron Sold to Highest Bidder

Columbus, Ohio, May 5 (AP).—The Lustron Corp., manufacturer of prefabricated steel houses, will be sold to the highest bidder.

An order to sell the giant Columbus plant, its machinery, land and patient rights, was approved today by United States District Judge Mell G. Underwood.

Lustron owes the Reconstruction Finance Corp. approximately $36,500,000. From the proceeds of the sale the RFC will attempt to recover as much of the money as it can.

The plant, which has been in the hands of an operating receiver for two months—during which it has still lost money—will continue in operation pending the sale.

The sale must be advertised for at least three weeks. Bidders must deposit $100,000 in cash or certified check, and must be prepared to pay cash for the plant.

The sale order recited that Lustron had failed to pay the RFC $36,593,696.92 plus 4 percent interest from March 4, when the firm was placed into receivership at the RFC's request.

Montana Governor Says Arrest Story Was Exaggerated

New Orleans, May 5 (AP).—Montant's Governor didn't say "yes" and he didn't say "no" that he was the John Bonner jailed in the gay French quarter here last night for drunkenness.

But the arrested man told police who booked him he was Governor Bonner, and he was booked that way. He also told newsmen upon his release he was the Governor. And a picture of him as he walked out of jail after a six-hour stay tallied sharply with Montana's chief executive.

Later, Governor Bonner telephoned the Associated Press at Helena, Mont., and said the stories "were grossly exaggerated," and that he believed it was "a practical joke." But he would not say more.

British Drug May Be Cure For Cold

London, May 5 (AP).—A group of British scientists tonight announced development of a drug that may cure the common cold overnight. The drug is called CF9.

The scientists said it may be used also in treating influenza, measles, scarlet fever, smallpox and infantile paralysis.

Frank Hepworth announced the discovery after Conservative F. J. Erroll told the House of Commons today British science has produced a new medical weapon that "may prove more important than penicillin."

Hepworth and Arthur M. Nicholls, a biochemist, then decided to make public the work on the new drug.

It has been tested in treating neuropathic virus in dogs. Nicholls said the disease usually was 80 percent fatal. Veterinarians using CF9, he added, reported 80 percent of the cases were cured.

CF9 has been used by six members of the research staff to cure their colds, Nicholls said.

Burma Finance Chief Coming to Washington

Rangoon, Burma, May 5 (AP).—Hla Maung, Burma's Finance Secretary, will visit Washington soon "on official confidential business" for his government, it was learned today.

Hla Maung left here for London May 1, and it was learned that he will go to Washington for a week's visit. Newspapers here are displaying stories that Burma wants economic aid from the United States.

Electricity Saves Woman From Poison

Detroit, May 5 (AP).—The wife of a psychiatrist attending the American Psychiatric Association convention here took an overdose of sleeping pills and was saved by a new electric treatment.

The new treatment was reported at this meeting. The wife took the overdose Wednesday night, the occasion of the association's banquet. She had been suffering from depression.

Her husband found her unconscious. He called Dr. Theodore R. Robie, of East Orange, N. J., another psychiatric delegate. Dr. Robie had reported on the new electric treatment a few weeks ago. He credited the discovery to Medical Officer Hirschfeld of the Veterans' Administration Hospital, Lyons, N. J.

When Dr. Robie reached the hotel bedside here the woman was unconscious, nothing brought any response, and she was showing signs of turning blue. He attached small metal electrodes to his patient's head, and through wires connected to them gave her a mild electric current. In ten minutes she had recovered consciousness and was virtually recovered.

This, he said, is both the newest and quickest method of reviving people who have taken overdoses of sleeping pills. It is not electric shock, electric sleep, or electronarcosis, used in mental troubles.

Schlemmer Will Quit Hanford Plant Post

Fred C. Schlemmer will quit his job as manager of operations at the Hanford, Wash., plant of the Atomic Energy Commission on May 31.

Announcing this yesterday, General Manager Carroll L. Wilson said:

"Mr. Schlemmer's leaving will be a serious loss to the atomic energy program. He has made a record of real accomplishment in one of the commission's most important and difficult projects, the expansion of the Hanford plutonium production plants."

Schlemmer plans to join a construction and engineering firm in New York.

Big Form Reversal

Best Tip on Derby At Pookman Drug

By Red Smith

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (NYHT.) May 5.—Pookman's Drug Store, at Third and Chestnut sts., has a large sign on the window announcing: "No raise in liquor prices." This is the biggest form reversal since Donerail won the Kentucky Derby at $91.45 in 1913, and it may be taken as an omen of the unbelievable things that could happen here tomorrow.

Louisville braced itself today and visitors braced one another, collecting in small, tight groups for mutual support and pondering over the conflicting possibilities offered by the seventy-sixth contest for the pelf and posies which the late Col. Matt Winn made famous.

Red Smith

Twenty-four hours before post time, this one looked like the most interesting, attractive and possibly the best Derby within memory. A good many years have passed since it was possible to make so good a case for so many horses.

It is, strictly speaking, the first Kentucky Derby, the other 75 having served as preps for the coming of Col. Bill Corum, the Missouri major from New York. Colonel Corum, christened Martene Windsor Corum in Boonville, Mo., succeeded to the presidency of Churchill Downs last winter after the death of Col. Matt J. Winn, who saw the first Derby from the tailboard of a wagon in 1875 and, as he grew in grace and wisdom, first watched, then bet on, and then managed all the others.

Considering tomorrow's possibilities, you begin with Your Host, the wry-necked colt from California upon which Hollywood conferred immortality when he won the Santa Anita Derby for William Goetz, of the nickelodeon set.

Everyone concedes that Your Host has great speed, and everyone not unhinged by residence west of the Sierra Madres has been searching the field for another speed horse to teach Your Host how squalid life can be in the fifth quarter of a mile-and-a-quarter race.

The first candidate for this role which comes to mind is Middleground, the King Ranch colt that was rated best of the 1949 2-year-olds and has run for good seconds in his only starts this year. His trainer, Max Hirsch, could conceivably send Middleground out to race the legs off Your Host in the hope that the King Ranch's stout maiden, On the Mark, could get there when the pace cooled.

Such strategy would, however, reflect astonishing faith in On The Mark, a horse that has never won.

NOW IT develops that Sonny Whitney's blaze-faced chestnut, Mr. Trouble, probably has as much speed as Your Host could handle, over three-quarters of a mile, at least. This didn't seem to be true a fortnight ago when Mr. Trouble finished six and a half lengths behind Your Host as the latter broke the Keeneland record for seven furlongs.

Mr. Trouble went on to win the Blue Grass Stakes, though, and yesterday he missed the track record for five furlongs here by only two-fifths of a second in an impressive workout. He carried an exercise boy who must weigh 140 pounds and seemed to be galloping as he came around in 59 2-5 seconds over a drying track that was not at its swiftest.

This was three-fifths of a second faster than Your Host had worked half an hour earlier, carrying 112-pound Johnny Longden, so it suggested that Mr. Trouble has been improving—possibly fast enough to win everything.

Oil Capitol is in the sixth stall, where he could get jammed up at the start, and Hill Prince is just inside him. This is no break for Hill Prince, potent though the winner of the first Experimental Handicap and the Wood Memorial is. He is a plodder, not especially agile at the start, and could get tangled behind horses as hopelessly as he did in the second Experimental.

Nevertheless, he's a large hunk of race horse who'll have a bright batch of skill named Eddie Arcaro on his withers. You don't have to look past him to find all the horse anybody could ask for a Derby.

There are 10 others, and they wouldn't be in there if their owners or trainers hadn't found, or thought they found, some reason for it. That even goes for Hallieboy, the rookie from the bush leagues, who arrived here so tuckered after 37 hours in a van that he cast himself in his stall and had to be helped to his feet by his lady groom, Mrs. H. C. Goodson.

Hallieboy's prospects brightened today. He got up by himself.

FAVORITE WORKS OUT—Your Host, Kentucky Derby favorite, works five-eighths of a mile in one minute flat as he preps for the big race at Churchill Downs today. Jockey Johnny Longden, who will ride Your Host in the Derby, was up on the California entry

Your Host on Rail, Hill Prince Is No. 5

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Louisville, Ky., May 5.—Your Host, the horse with the evil eye and the honest speed, will try to put the whammy on 14 rivals in the seventy-sixth running of the Kentucky Derby tomorrow.

If you like him—Hollywood wouldn't trade him for an Oscar—you can get in the neighborhood of 9-5 as the field marches postward for better or worse in America's most colorful hoss race.

Your Host's luck was with him today when he drew No. 1 post position, the spot on the track he would have chosen himself had he been asked.

In addition to the William Goetz speedster, Your Host, the others, in line-up order, are: C. V. Whitney's ominously-named Mr. Trouble and stablemate Dooly; Willorene Farm's Trumpet King, Christopher Chenery's Hill Prince, Tom Gray's Oil Capitol, Walter Fugate's Hallieboy, Brookmeade Stable's Sunglow, H. P. Headley's Lotowhite, Abercombie and Smith's Stranded, King Ranch's On The Mark, William Veeneman's Black George, Clifford Mooer's Hawley, King Ranch's Middleground and Brookmeade's Greek Ship.

The entries brought no surprises. Theory, along with Wisconsin Boy, were not made eligible. With Theory out, Calumet Farm, winner of four derbies, will not be represented for the first time since 1946.

Trumpet King Doubtful

The starters may be whittled down to a dozen before post time of 5:30 p. m. (Washington time). Several entries want a fast track and others an off course, otherwise they will be scratched.

Trumpet King, a rank outsider, is doubly a doubtful starter due to a filling in his right hind leg. However, he showed no distress after a workout this morning.

Despite the presence of West Coast money, which seems to assure Your Host the favorite role, the race really is as wide open as the acquisitive palms of the local natives—a perennial if there ever was one, referring, of course, to the palms.

As usual Derby eve has developed a "hot thing" in Mr. Trouble. The Whitneyite, believed by many to have been ideally "brought to the race," seemed to be gaining support hourly. There also is a rather unexplainable trend toward On the Mark who goes coupled with Middleground.

Hill Prince Second Bet

Hill Prince, slated to be a 5-2 second choice, and Oil Capitol, the forgotten colt of the race, seemed to have regained prestige as the hour for the famous mile and a quarter approaches. Perhaps they're not as gaudy as the California gang, but Virginians, every one a disciple of Hill Prince, hardly are outnumbered.

Hill Prince had the sharpest blowout of the morning. He breezed three furlongs in :34 4-5. Sunglow, Greek Ship, Trumpet King, Lotowhite and Hallieboy Television station WTTG, Channel 9, will show the Derby pictures at 10:30 Sunday night, Washington time.

Noren, Coan Hit Homers; Yost, Grasso Errors Hurt

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Steve Nagy had the support of everyone at Griffith Stadium except the Nats last night, and it cost him a 9-6 lacing at the hands of the league-leading Detroit Tigers.

Entrusted with a tie game twice and a two-run lead on a third occasion, the Nats turned out to be bad security risks. They made three errors which resulted in five unearned runs for the Tigers.

It was the second straight defeat for the Nats—equaling their longest streak of the new season—and also ended Nagy's personal winning streak of two in a row, both accomplished at the expense of the New York Yankees.

Noren, Coan Homer

Along with Nagy, Irv Noren and Gil Coan were not among Manager Bucky Harris' juveniles who were delinquent in their baseball. Noren lashed out a two-run homer in the third inning to tie the game and Coan launched an abortive ninth inning rally by whacking out his third homer of the year.

But Catcher Mickey Grasso and Third Baseman Eddie Yost were definitely in the bad boy class. Grasso was charged with two errors—one of which was not entirely his fault—and Yost made the third, the sum total of which gave the Bengals their five undeserved tallies.

Despite the antics of Grasso, Nagy was still very much in the ball game as late as the seventh inning, what with the Nats having disposed of Virgil Trucks in the fifth and owning no less than a tie.

But the Tigers, aided by three solid smacks and Yost's timely two-base error, dissolved the stalemate with four runs, quite enough to give Paul Trout, the second of three Detroit pitchers, his first victory of 1950.

Detroit had loaded the bases with two singles and a walk in the fatal eighth when trouble began to pile up for the soft-balling Nagy. He eased his own burdens temporarily by inducing Pinch-hitter Don Kolloway to hit into a forced play at the plate for the first out.

Pat Mullin, batting for Trout, then got the tie-breaking run in with a long fly to right. That wasn't too bad. But what happened next was simply terrible.

Johnny Lipon grounded to Yost who promptly threw the ball into the dirt and two runs scored. Former Nat Gerry Priddy then delivered Lipton with a double to

Ben Leading Alexander by 4, Snead by 6

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 5 (AP).—Ben Hogan, as hot as the sun-baked course, shot his second straight 64 today to take a 4-stroke lead at the Greenbrier Open golf tournament's halfway mark.

The great little Texan needed that round, however, to open up his first-place advantage over Skip Alexander of Knoxville, Tenn. Alexander also was six under regulation for the par 70, 6368-yard layout.

Alexander, who had a 68 yesterday, in turn was two strokes in front of Sammy Snead after the host Slammer, playing in the same threesome with Hogan, tacked a 68 onto his first-round 66.

David Douglas of Wilmington, Del., Glenn Teal of Memphis, Jim Ferrier of San Francisco, Ed Furgol of Royal Oak, Mich., Fred Hawkins of El Paso, Tex., and Norman Von Nida of Sydney, Australia, each had a 67 today.

George Fazio of Washington's Woodmont Country Club tacked a 71 onto yesterday's 72, for 143.

Cubs Upset Bums in 10th

Chicago, May 5 (AP).—Newcomer Ransom Jackson, Arkansas-born third baseman, homered in the teenth inning today to give the Chicago Cubs a 7-6 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Hank Sauer, veteran Chicago outfielder, sent the game into overtime when he socked his first home run of the season with two on and two out in the ninth inning.

King Stops Jones in 6th

Arthur King of Canada, lightweight champion of the British Empire, won a technical knockout over Herbie (Biff) Jones of Washington, D. C., in 2 minutes, 43 seconds of the sixth round at Uline Arena last night.

Jones seconds leaped into the ring after he had been floored for a second time in the sixth. King also knocked down the local lightweight in the third round.

King, in racking up his twenty-fourth straight victory, toyed with the left-handed Jones, winning every round before the end came. The loss stopped an 11-fight winning streak for Jones. He weighed 136½, King 138. The crowd was less than 300.

In preliminaries, Jimmy Sewell, 136, knocked out Jimmy Foust, 132, in 44 seconds of the fourth round; Danny Richardson, 140, Trenton, N. J., outpointed Lucky Boy, 137; Andy Nathan, 145, TKO'd Jack Ford, 143, in the third round, and Gurney Van Hook 131½, Philadelphia, TKO'd Pat Thomas, 128, in 2:59 of the fifth round.

'Hurting Game,' Griff Says—

Nats, Television Pioneers, Probably Will Ban It in '51

Clark Griffith, who once embraced television as "a good thing for baseball," is now about ready to divorce it.

"I haven't made up my mind definitely yet," the Nats president said yesterday, "but I doubt if we'll televise our games next year."

Washington was one of the first major league teams to televise its home games, beginning in 1947.

"I've seen the damage television has done to the minor league clubs," Griff continued. "It ran Newark out of business and it's crippling other towns." That's bad for baseball. I'm going to ask the major leagues to ban television of major league games into minor league territory."

Washington's home attendance for seven games this year is 91,328, 4000 less than for the same period last year.

The Nats reportedly receive $125,000 from the Liggett and Myers Tobacco Co. for the rights to televise 77 home games and broadcast all 154 games.

If the Nats drop television, as Griffith seems intent on doing, none of Washington's three major professional sports will be televised. The basketball Washington Caps discontinued it last year and the Redskins are dropping it this season.

Your Host Draws Rail In Derby

also turned in three-panel spins. The others were walked or galloped under the shed.

May Be Worth $93,450

If all 15 start in the 1950 edition of the "Run for the Roses," the race will have a gross value of $121,500 or a net to the winner of $93,450, second highest in Derby history. King Ranch's Assault pocketed $96,400 for the record in 1946.

A crowd of 90,000 is expected and the weather prediction is for showers. However, this track has been resurfaced and hasn't been termed "heavy" since. The oval was nearing the fast stage today and light rain would not be a hindrance.

Never has interest been keener hereabouts, with the sectional angles adding zest to the show.

Our Haight Picks Hill Prince to Win

Louisville, Ky., May 5.—I'm forced to pick Hill Prince to win the Derby, despite jibes from Your Host backers who have labeled the Virginia-bred as the "over the hill to the poorhouse" colt. I'll take Oil Capitol and Your Host to fill out the pay-off circle.

—HAIGHT.

Almost every part of the Nation is represented in the field—Virginia-bred Hill Prince, Texas-bred Middleground, California-bred Your Host. Add to these the usual flood of Kentucky stock. In fact, the horse outlay goes even into Tennessee, the State in which Hallieboy first saw the light of day.

The stoutest of the Kentucky breds are Mr. Trouble and Oil Capitol. The improving Mr. Trouble took the Blue Grass Stakes while Oil Capitol won the rich Flamingo Stakes at Hialeah.

Arcaro Seeks Fifth

Eddie Arcaro, on Hill Prince, will be riding for his fifth Derby triumph—a feat denied him when Olympia stopped under him last spring. He won with Lawrin (1938), Whirlaway (1941), Hoop, Jr. (1945) and Citation (1948).

Johnny Longden, the tiny man who brought Count Fleet home in 1943, has said they'll not only have to catch Your Host but they'll have to pass him if another horse is to win.

No pre-Derby story would be complete without reference to Hallieboy, the 3-year-old who could become the "golden boy" horse of all time. Although, like almost everybody else, I believe King Midas would have to come to life and give him the magic touch.

Sports for All At Maryland

Name your favorite sport and you can see it at College Park this afternoon. It's University of Maryland's annual Field Day, and on the agenda are track and field, tennis, baseball and lacrosse.

A lacrosse game between Maryland and Army opens the carnival at noon in Byrd Stadium. Five minutes later, behind the end zone, the high jumping event will start a 33-event track and field meet with 35 high and prep schools entered.

At 1:30, with some matches on Maryland's courts and some at nearby Mount Rainier High, the Terrapin netmen cross racquets with Virginia Military Institute. And at 2:30, Georgetown's baseball team tackles Maryland on the diamond in back of Byrd Stadium.

The track meet, expected to take up six hours, is the highlight.

Walter Haight Interprets

Hill Prince Tells Field What He Thinks of It

(Editor's Note—Our Walter Haight, trying to be as helpful as he is heavy, has handled correspondence for Derby horses several times in the past. Last year he aided Olympia in writing a rebuttal of a statement from a New England doctor who branded horses as the dumbest of all animals. Thus when Hill Prince, a Virginia horse, suh, had a message to convey it was only natural that he looked up Haight.)

AN OPEN LETTER TO MY DERBY OPPONENTS:

Dear also-rans:

So you all are going to try to beat me in the Derby. Really, my heart goes out to you all. It's a darn shame you all weren't born a year earlier because tomorrow you all are going to belong to me.

You certainly have a lot of nerve thinking you have a chance with a Virginia gentleman. You still have time to duck out and save face.

You guys like Lotowhite, On the Mark, and Sunglow could simply withdraw, if you're smart. And for some of the others of you all like Greek Ship, Hallieboy and Stranded could put on the lame act and maybe your trainers will scratch you.

Let me remind you all, however, something must be done quickly—it's later than you think.

But I don't want anything to be wrong with you so-called big shots. That goes for you, Your Host, and your friends like Middleground, Oil Capitol and Mr. Trouble. I want you to stick around and take your beating.

I guess you are wondering why I'm sore. Well, I'll tell you all.

I was born and raised in Virginia and I was training last winter at Doswell, just outside of Richmond, and members of the Virginia General Assembly used to come out in the morning to watch me do my stuff.

Fellows like Lieut. Gov. Pat Collins and Senator Ray Guest got all steamed up about me and so I made the most of it and started to do some lobbying for us horses—and no cracks about me being a 5-percenter.

Well, I had those guys thinking about passing a racing bill and outlawing frozen horse meat before I was shipped to New York—I don't want to rub it in but remember the Wood Memorial?

So I get down here to Churchill Downs and what happens? I find a whispering campaign about me. Pay attention, Your Host, because I heard that crack you made when you galloped past me—I was going the other way, incidentally—the one about "They'll carry that bum back to Ole Virginny in a packing box." "I'll get even, because you're cocky, cock-eyed, and from California.

I don't like you, either, Oil Capitol. It was a stableboy from your barn who tried to hang the nickname "Virginia Creeper" on me. You might have a little oil but you ain't no gusher.

And if Middleground don't read this, I want one of you all to tell him I'm going to have him in the middle because his trainer has been referring to me as "Downhill Prince." By the way, they gave that Middleground a long name to begin with so I wonder why they didn't go all the way and put "hog" on the end of it.

As for you, Mr. Trouble, I have a beef against you and so has my jockey, Eddie Arcaro.

You didn't think that I'd find out that it was you who said, "Why don't they tie that big-nosed Arcaro on the back of Hill Prince and use them for plowing?"

I guess every one of you all has made some crack or another about my short tail.

If there's any of you who haven't seen it, don't worry, 'cause you'll have a good look when I pass you in the home stretch.

Scornfully,
HILL PRINCE.

Bill Bennings Says

DEAR FOLKS
AT PIMLICO

Grand Barter, 4-year-old gelding by Grand Slam out of Bartering Kate, who won yesterday's sixth race in such impressive style while racing under a $7000 claiming tag, appears to have been one of the smarter claims of the spring season. Trainer B. P. Bond took Grand Barter at Havre de Grace for $5000 in a race in which this performer finished third. Grand Barter then moved up to $7000, finishing second to March Chick at Havre, went to Garden State and finished second for the same price behind Iron Pigeon and yesterday galloped in that sort of company. March Chick was among those behind Grand Barter. See you on the rail.

left and also a new Washington pitcher, Mickey Harris, who finally got the side out.

Trailing 9-5, the Nats refused to permit the 16,338 spectators to go home until the very last out of the ball game.

Calvert Homer Victim

They preserved their last thrill for Paul Calvert, who lost 14 in a row for Washington last year and who came in to do the pitching for Detroit in the ninth.

With one away, Gil Coan renewed acquaintances with Calvert by slamming his homer. After Noren had popped up, Eddie Robinson and Ed Stewart singled and Sherry Robertson walked to put the tieing runs on base.

In this crisis and with the crowd screaming its lungs out Clyde Vollmer stepped in to pinch hit for Dente. He worked the count to 3 and 2 on Calvert and then took a vicious swing. You guessed it, he missed the ball and that was the ball game.

Detroit's 10 hits, one less than the Nats made, included four doubles and two triples. Hoot Evers' triple batted them into a 1-0 lead in the second and Johnny Groth singled him home for a 2-0 lead.

It remained that way until the third when Noren pickled a Truck fast ball out of the premises with Coan aboard to tie the count.

Tigers Regain Lead

The Tigers regained command at 3-2 without a hit in the fifth. Lipon walked with one away and on the first pitch to Priddy he broke for second. Grasso's throw was perfect, but neither Dente nor Robertson covered and Lipon went to third, scoring a moment later as Priddy grounded out.

The Nats promptly scored three runs in their half of the same inning to move into a 5-3 lead. Singles by Yost and Noren and Robinson's double got one tally in. Robertson's long fly delivered the second and Dente's single brought in the third and a new Tiger pitcher, Trout, who finally quelled the disturbance.

Came the sixth, Grasso's error and two more unearned Detroit runs, with one away, Grasso dropped Evers' pop fly in front of the plate. Groth walked and Kryhoski delivered a double to left center to score both and tie the score.

That's the way it remained until the wooly eighth.

Terps Win On 3-Hitter By Soderberg

Righthander Don Soderberg yielded one hit in each of the first three innings and then hurled hitless ball the rest of the way in leading Maryland to a 7-1 triumph over North Carolina yesterday at College Park.

Soderberg, in winning his fourth game against one defeat, faced only 20 batters in the last six innings. One man reached first on a walk, the other on an error. Soderberg struck out five men and walked two.

Top Personnel Shifts Expected Shortly at Interior Department

The following high-level shifts will be announced soon at Interior:

William Zimmerman, assistant commissioner of the Indian Bureau, will be transferred to the Bureau of Land Management as its assistant director.

Rex Lee will be appointed associate commissioner of the Indian Bureau, being transferred from the Division of Territories where he was assistant director.

Dan Wheeler, assistant director of the program staff, will be named assistant director of the Division of Territories.

Dillon Myer yesterday was sworn in as Commissioner of Indian Affairs. He can be expected to make changes eventually in both the agency's personnel and policies.

ECA: The Economic Cooperation Administration is making these top-level changes:

John S. Canterbury has been promoted to deputy director of the organization and management division. He was with the Navy's Bureau of Supplies and Accounts.

William Colman, whom Canterbury succeeded, as been named assistant director of the technical assistance division.

Andrew H. Berding has been appointed deputy director in charge of public relations. He was formerly information chief of the ECA mission in Italy where he's reported to have done an outstanding joy in telling the story of ECA to the Italian people.

Alden W. Boyd has been appointed acting director of administration on a temporary basis. The director, Donald Stone, is en route to Korea for a management study of the ECA mission there.

PEOPLE: John Griner is being backed for national president of the AFL's American Federation of Government Employes by several of the union's Midwest locals. Audrey Mathews, 13, Masters 'Sardonic' for Spelling Title

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

Thirteen - year - old Audrey Mathews, who claims she doesn't read much and is "not really bright," was well-read and bright enough to run away with the 1950 Greater Washington Spelling Bee last night.

Audrey, an eighth grader at St. Cecilia's High School, won a $100 savings bond and will represent Washington May 26 in the National Spelling Bee at the National Press Club auditorium.

She did it by going through 14 rounds without a mistake before some 800 people at the Department of Commerce auditorium, then spelling "genealogy" where another had failed and, to clinch it, the final word, "sardonic."

Audrey, who told a reporter she said a lot of prayers during the three-hour match, won over 100 other seventh, eighth and ninth graders of public, private and parochial schools.

She is the daughter of Mrs. Audrey M. Mathews of 3965 R st. se., administrative officer in the State Department munitions division.

The contestant who missed "genealogy," but who spelled 14 other words correctly to become runner-up was Graham Slade, 15, seventh grader at Brentwood Junior High School. He won $75 in bonds.

Graham, who lives at 907 Ray rd., Hampshire Knolls, Md., was born in England and still has a bit of a British accent, having been in this country not quite two years.

Graham has had some trouble with asthma, which has kept him out of school for long periods, and he has "done a bit of reading" while he had to stay in bed. He likes "old things, like museums and old books," he said last night.

His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Laurence E. Slade. His father is employed in the printing department of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

Other prize winners were:

James Cawood, jr., 13, eighth grade, St. Francis Xavier School, son of Dr. and Mrs. James Cawood of 3334 Erie st. se., $50 bond.

Anthony Lash, 13, eighth grade, St. Stephen's School, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Lash, 2920 King st., Alexandria, $25 bond.

Evangeline Lewis, 14, eighth grade, Francis Junior High School, $10 cash. Her guardian is Mrs. Durita L. Wood, 528½ 26th st. nw.

Prizes were presented by Richard Hollander, managing editor of the Washington Daily News, which sponsored the bee. The pronouncer was Norman Reed, WWDC program manager.

Judges were English professors Miss Edith Menard, Howard University; Averett Howard, George Washington University; and John C. Clendenin from American University.

Beall Declines Bid to Sign Home Rule Bill

Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.) said yesterday he is declining the request of the Montgomery County League of Women Voters that he sign the District home rule discharge petition.

The petition, if signed by 218 House members, would take the Senate-approved home rule bill out of the hands of the House District Committee, which tabled it last year, and present it to a vote of the House.

A delegation from the Montgomery County group, headed by Mrs. James Bennett, president, called on Beall yesterday at his Capitol Hill office.

Beall said his decision not to sign the discharge petition was based on his membership in the House District Committee which still retains custody of the bill.

He said he did not feel it would be fair as a member of the committee to sign a petition to take the bill out of the committee's hands.

"I think the people of the District should have the right to vote in presidential elections and to have a delegate in Congress like Alaska and Hawaii do," he said.

The presidential voting for District residents would require a Constitutional amendment.

As for the nonvoting delegate, Congressional District leaders have considered such a move, and feel it could be done with a simple statute, rather than a constitutional amendment.

Representatives Beall said he voted in the last Congress for the District home rule bill, then sponsored by Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.).

Beall said, however, he now feels the approach to home rule should be through turning over greater powers to the District Commissioners who are appointed by the President.

The Montgomery County League of Women Voters made public a statement they gave Beall on the home rule bill. It said home rule is in the platform of their national organization. It said they felt Beall should sign the discharge petition. It gave the following reasons for adoption of home rule:

1. Because every American citizen should have the right to vote.

2. Because to the American citizen taxation without representation is a great injustice.

3. Because the manner in which the District of Columbia is governed also affects our county.

4. Since the Congressman from the Sixth District generally is a member of the District Affairs Committee, which necessarily takes a considerable amount of time, we would be interested to have him released from such duties in order that he might devote more time to his own district.

Prosecution Witness Aids Dairy Defense

The Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association dominates the local market because it has become the "only dependable, large supplier" of District-inspected milk, a witness declared yesterday.

Testifying in District Court in the milk conspiracy case, William B. Hooper, association office manager, made the statement repeatedly, denying that such control was attained by illegal means, such as limiting competition or price-fixing.

Hooper was under cross-examination yesterday by attorneys for the association, its secretary-treasurer, Bruce B. Derrick and seven area dairies. Originally called as a prosecution witness to identify association documents, Hooper has been converted into a star defense witness.

Prosecution Complains

One of the prosecution staff, F. Kirk Maddrix, special assistant to the Attorney General, complained, "The defense is making Mr. Hooper their witness."

He asked for permission to cross-examine, but Judge Alexander Holtzoff refused this, commenting that the attorney could object to any questions beyond "the proper scope."

Late in the afternoon Robert H. Winn, special assistant to the Attorney General, began questioning Hooper on redirect examination. The trial will go into its fourth day Monday at 10 a. m.

Hooper, the only witness thus far, under cross-examination by William E. Leahy, counsel for Derrick and principal defense spokesman, denied several allegations in the Government's indictment.

Without Written Contract

Hooper testified that Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase and Thompson's dairies, which between them buy 59 percent of the association supply, have purchased milk from the association since September 30, 1948, without a written contract and without any assurance that no milk would be purchased elsewhere.

The indictment charges the distributors entered into written and verbal agreements to purchase their entire supply from the association to the extent the group was able to met requirements.

Hooper declared the association didn't need contracts. Distributors bought from the association because it was the only dependable supplier of milk in large quantities, he explained. The association supplies 80 percent of the milk sold in the city, he testified.

It had no interest in setting retail prices, being concerned only with good prices for the farmer-producers, Hooper emphasized.

Firehouse TV Aerial Kayoed By Early Morning Lightning

A thunderstorm which rumbled into activity at 6:56 a.m. yesterday sent a lightning bolt crashing into the wooden-framed hose tower of No. 31 Engine Co. 18 minutes later.

The bolt roused firemen at the engine company, an alarm was sounded and brought on the run Engine Companies 20 and 28, the No. 12 truck company, the No. 2 rescue squad and Battalion Chief Fred Litteral of the 5th Battalion.

Damage to the tower was slight but the company's television aerial was burned out. The engine company is at 4930 Connecticut av. nw.

The rainfall continued sporadically until 9:50 a.m A total of .10 inches of rain fell.

The storm took a freak turn in sections of nearby Maryland where residents reported hail fell briskly for a short time.

Yesterday's high was 81 at 4:40 p.m. with a low of 61 at 5:20 a.m.

The forecaster said today will be partly cloudy with a chance of scattered showers and a high temperature in the middle eighties. Sunday should be fair and cooler, he said.

Embassy Hit As Milk Row Instigator

Producers' Official Blames Controversy Over Importation On Non-Buyer

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

The Commissioners' conference Thursday on whether to prohibit imported—and cheaper than local—milk and to lighten sterilization requirements will be a hot one.

Yesterday, when informed of the conference, Bruce B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, charged the meeting was instigated by a non-association distributor worried about supplies if the ban is imposed June 30, as scheduled.

Derrick declared, "Embassy (Dairy) is at the root o it because of its position when the ban goes into effect."

Backs Renewal of Ban

The association strongly favors reimposition of the ban, Derrick declared, and will continue to back it.

The Embassy Dairy, 1620 1st st. nw., does not buy presently from the Maryland-Virginia group. Two years ago the dairy formed a milk producers' cooperative of about 100 farmers in the Cumberland, Md., area.

James J. Ward, Embassy president, could not be reached for comment on the Derrick statement. His son, James J. Ward, jr., vice president, said he had no comment.

Since November, 1942, because of the wartime shortage of milk, local distributors have been permitted to sell milk purchased from farms not inspected by the District Health Department. The commissioners last December decided to reimpose the ban on such imported milk on June 30.

More Favorable

Derrick said Embassy and other dairies are "getting a more favorable purchase price on imported milk."

The Maryland-Virginia group, which produces 80 percent of the local supply, has already prepared for the possibility of several non-purchasers coming back into the fold after the June 30 deadline.

Derrick revealed the association directors at its January meeting passed a resolution authorizing sale to all distributors now purchasing "emergency milk" in any amount at the identical price as any other buyer.

The association official said the group will oppose authorization of chemical sterilization as an alternative to steam. He declared the chemical method is not cheaper "if properly done" and does not assure as pure a product.

Farmer Have Equipment

In addition, he declared Washington milkshed farmers have installed the equipment necessary for steam sterilization under orders of the Health Department and now feel this interest should be protected.

Proponents of chemical sterilization have declared the method cheaper and have said it would attract milk from nearby farmers now sending to Baltimore and Philadelphia where the chemical method is accepted. This would help non-association distributors cut off from imported milk supplies if the ban is reimposed.

Others who will attend the District Building conference Thursday at 10 a. m., are:

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, Health Officer; John E. Noble, director of Laboratories in the Health Department; Walter W. Burdette, director, Bureau of Food Inspection, Health Department; Dr. A. W. Fuchs, director, Milk and Food Control, United States Public Health Service; Dr. D. L. Taylor, Chief, Milk Sanitation, USPHS.

Also, Dr. C. J. Babcock, chief dairy manufacture technologist, Agriculture Department; James J. Ward, president, Embassy Dairy; Robert J. Wilson, executive secretary and Lofton S. Wesley, president, Washington Restaurant Association; Bourbon A. Dawes, executive secretary, Washington Hotel Association; Otto Phillips, vice president, Wakefield Dairy; P. D. Diggs, president, Model Farms Dairy, and C. Y. Stephens, owner, Highland Farms Dairy.

None of the four dairies buys milk from the Producers Asociation, Derrick said.

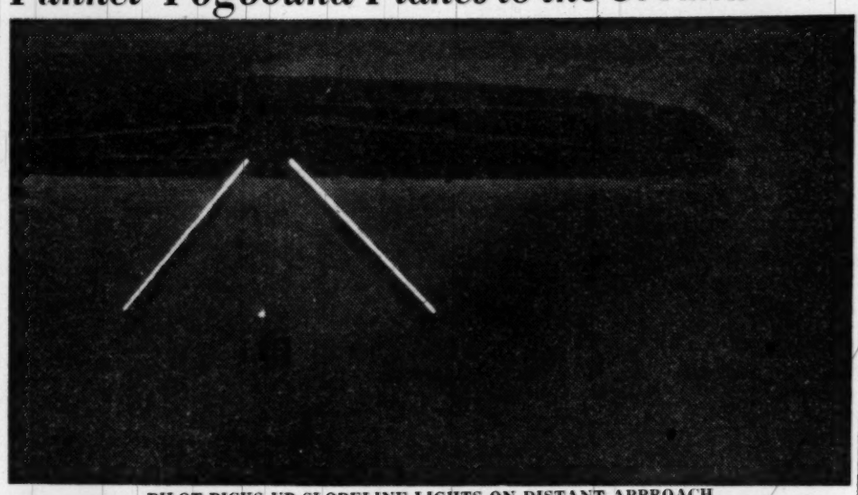
Jailed Trucker Found in Coma Hanging in Cell

A truck driver, arrested on a drunk charge, was found unconscious in his Eleventh Precinct cell Thursday night, one end of his shirt tied around his neck and the other attached to the upper part of the cell door.

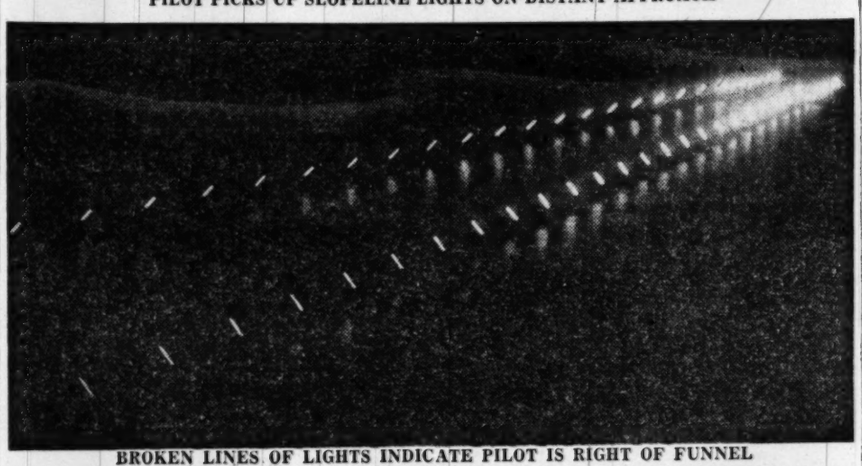
The man, Charles W. Creech, 44, of 420 11th st. ne., was given artificial respiration and then removed to Gallinger Hospital, where his condition was described as good. A charge of mental observation was lodged against him.

Creech was arrested Thursday at 5 p.m. in the 1400 block of 22d st. se. He was found slumped against the cell door by policemen making a routine check at 10:15 p. m.

National Airport's New $165,000 Lights 'Funnel' Fogbound Planes to the Ground



PILOT PICKS UP SLOPELINE LIGHTS ON DISTANT APPROACH



BROKEN LINES OF LIGHTS INDICATE PILOT IS RIGHT OF FUNNEL

PILOT SEES PERFECT FUNNEL AS HE MAKES PROPER APPROACH

The Civil Aeronautics Administration showed off its latest safety device at National Airport last night — 2500 feet of "slopeline" lights to guide fogbound pilots to the ground.

A preview for reporters and press photographers proved the new project, which cost $165,000, will be an asset to pilots probing the water approach to the main runway in bad weather or at night.

"It provides the missing link in those few precious seconds between the use of instruments and the need for visual aids in landing a plane," one CAA official declared.

To show how they work, the CAA provided a transport plane for the press.

C. F. Horne, acting director of the Office of Federal Airways, CAA, held a briefing at the airport before take-off.

The new lights will take the place of a neon bar system in use for many years to aid pilots making instrument approaches, he said.

After the high-intensity slopeline lights are commissioned later this month, the neon lights will be removed.

The new visual aids are the eighth such installation in the United States for civil operational use. Others are at Arcata, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Los Angeles, Idlewild, Newark and Chicago.

National Airport, scene of two major air disasters in the last year, will appear at the end of two funnel-shaped rows of white lights as seen from the cockpit of an incoming plane.

They form a perfect funnel if the pilot's approach is accurate. If he is to one side of the glide path, too high or too low, the lines of light break up into individual bars indicating the correct direction he should fly.

The 64 bar-shaped fixtures, each with several sealed-beam lights, extend for 500 feet on the ground and for 2500 feet into the Potomac River on specially built pilings.

Three Municipal Judges Face Payless Pay Day Next Week

The three judges of the Municipal Court of Appeals here probably will go home without their pay next Tuesday.

District Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler said yesterday the District will be unable to pay Judges Nathan Cayton, Andrew M. Hood and Brice Clagett their salary unless Congress passes the $6,638,400 deficiency pay bill now before it.

District officials generally agreed it was possible but not likely that the bill will be passed by Tuesday.

Fowler added, moreover, that if the bill is not passed by May 23, some 5000 District employes will miss out on their pay that day. They will include employes in Municipal Court, Gallinger Hospital, the office of Chief Clerk of Public Works, the Water Division and all employes of the public schools, except teachers.

Lack of funds will hit the salaries of the teachers next if the bill is not passed by June 1, Fowler said. He added he has been assured by the House Appropriations Committee's District Subcommittee that the bill will be given high priority.

The bad news about pay for the three judges and District employes followed a report yesterday that 28 jurors who served in Juvenile Court from January 1 through March have not been paid for their services because of lack of funds.

At this time, Juvenile Court is about $200 short of the money needed to pay the jurors, the office of Judge Edith H. Cockrill said. Out of fairness to all 28 who served, none of them will be paid until the deficiency bill is passed and all can be paid, a spokesman said.

Several reasons were given for the shortage. It was explained that last July 1, jury fees were increased from $5 to $7 a day. The jury budget of $2000 per annum, however, was not increased to meet the higher fees.

The situation was described as only temporary. In addition to the emergency aid from Congress through the deficiency bill, the court also hopes to get an increased jury budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Chillum Woman, 35, Dies From Burns in Bed Blaze

A 35-year-old Chillum, Md., woman died at Leland Memorial Hospital last night from burns suffered when her bedding caught fire early yesterday.

The woman, Mrs. Betty McNamara suffered third-degree burns over four-fifths of her body, officials reported.

The injured woman's husband, John McNamara, pulled her from the flaming bedclothes and threw the mattress into the bathtub before the arrival of the Mount Rainier Rire Department. Only damage to the apartment at 1516 Chillum rd. was to the bedding and a shower curtain which was ignited from the burning mattress.

Firemen said it appeared Mrs. McNamara was [illegible] in bed.

2 Bondsmen, Simkins Talk To Grand Jury

Two Washington bondsmen were called before the District grand jury yesterday and questioned about who put up the bond for a man arrested recently on a gambling offense.

Subpenaed at the same time to appear as a witness before the grand jury was Roger "Whitetop" Simkins, convicted gambler, whose wife runs the Brass Rail Restaurant, 2823 7th st. nw., scene of an underworld double shooting two years ago.

The two bondsmen, Max Weinstein and his son, Leonard Weinstein, were asked who had put up the premium for the man they took out on bond after he was charged with operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips, it was learned. Leonard Weinstein reportedly told the jury the arrested man contacted him personally and paid the premium himself.

Simkins, who appeared with his attorney, James Hughes, was before the jury only five minutes. He had nothing to say about why he had been called there. Hughes said that Simkins had been asked to come back before the jury Monday.

Assistant United States Attorneys William Hitz and Edward Carey, who have been handling the majority of key gambling cases for the United States Attorney's office, were closeted with the grand jury during the appearance of the Weinsteins and Simkins.

Miss Anna F. Herdina, former Welfare Department official, was presented a certificate of merit by the Commissioners yesterday in recognition of 35 years service in the District Government.

Miss Herdina, who had served in the Welfare Department since it was established, was asistant superintendent of interstate services when she retired last month.

Jury Gets Rebuke by Judge After Freeing 3

Quinns and White Acquitted of Charge Of Gaming; Bailey Cites Guilt Evidence

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

A District Court jury was rebuked by the judge on its verdict yesterday after it acquitted three men of running a bookie joint at Barber's Newsstand, 427 10th st. nw.

The jury, which deliberated almost four hours after hearing the three-day trial, was told by Judge Jennings Bailey:

"Members of the jury, you have had a case in which you had rather clear evidence of the guilt of the defendants and you have returned a verdict of not guilty. That is all I can say."

Court officials said that such comments coming from a judge are extremely rare in the tribunal. Judge Bailey, 84-year-old patriarch of the bench, is noted for his judicial demeanor.

The defendants were John L. Quinn, 42, of 4308 2d rd., N. Arlington; his brother, William W. Quinn, 38, of 22 Old Glebe rd., Arlington, and Thomas B. White, 62, of 1104 N. Quincy st., Arlington.

Admitted Betting

All three had acknowledged placing bets on horse races in the "back room" of Barber's on numerous occasions, but denied flatly that they ever aided in its operation.

The trio was arrested after a series of raids at the instigation of the United States Attorney's office in March, 1949. A total of 36 persons was held in what Attorney George Morris Fay termed a 100 million dollar gambling industry here, but so far only four have been convicted.

In the Barber case, Defense Attorneys Edward Bennett Williams and Nicholas J. Chase argued that the newsstand "back room" had been a race horse betting room for 17 years and was patronized by "everybody on 10th street."

Four-Count Indictment

The defendants were charged in a four-count indictment with accepting bets and with keeping and setting up a gaming table for horse-race bets.

John Quinn described Barber's as a "thriving business" and said the betting operations were run by his brother-in-law, George Barbour, who is now deceased.

The Government was handicapped at the trial by the fact that evidence of alleged gambling was suppressed after it was ruled that the search warrant under which the evidence was seized was illegal.

Called Professional

Government Prosecutors John C. Conliff, jr., and William P. Arnold told the jury the defendants were "professional gamblers trying to hide behind a dead man."

The case turned on the testimoney of Undercoverman Wilfred D. Barrett, a Columbus University student employed by the United States attorney.

Barrett said that after visiting the newsstand 15 times, he gained admittance to the rear room where behind a steel door a "typical" horse shop was operated. Barrett said he placed bets on two occasions with the Quinns while White acted as "boardboy," according to Barrett.

Admits Mistakes

However, Barrett acknowledged he had incorrectly described White in applying for the arrest warrant by overestimating his weight and height and calling him blonde instead of grey-haired.

John Quinn had two witnesses who testified they saw him in New York City on January 7, one of the dates when Barrett said he bet with him at Barber's.

Police visited Barber's shortly before the raid by United States marshals but at neither time was the place operating. The police visit was made after a woman wrote a newspaper complaining of activities at the newsstand.

Dupont Underpass Opened to Traffic

Dupont Circle was opened to traffic yesterday morning and got past its first rush hours without incident.

The report at the Third Police Precinct was that things were going "very nicely" at both the circle and underpass.

Samuel R. Harrison, deputy director of highways for the District, said it will probably be several days or weeks before the underpass will carry its expected load. Traffic habits of two years' standing won't change overnight, he said.

Highway planners estimate that 22,000 cars daily will eventually use the underpass, Harrison said. No first day traffic count was available last night, he said.

Opening of the underpass brought announcement of further changes in bus routes and a change in traffic direction on 21st st.

John H. Mitton, District traffic engineer, said 21st st. from Massachusetts ave. north to Florida ave. will change from one-way south to one-way north after the Monday - morning rush hour. Eighteenth and N sts., also used as detours during construction, reverted back to normal use yesterday.

Capital Transit Co. anounced these changes effective Monday at 9:30 a. m.:

L-4 buses will go south on Connecticut ave. and 20th st. instead of Florida ave. and 21st st.

P-1 (Petworth) buses will go around the circle on New Hampshire ave. instead of by-passing it.

Capital Transit said the L-7 southbound rush-hour express from Chevy Chase Circle will start using the underpass, instead of 21st st., Tuesday morning. At 2 a. m Tuesday the Mt. Pleasant Owl line, will be routed straight down Connecticut ave., passing the circle on the surface, Capital Transit announced.

6 Months in Jail

Driver Gets Maximum on Drunk Count

Robert Scott Corbin, 33, of Springfield, Va., yesterday was given a maximum sentence of six months in jail for driving while drunk.

The sentence was imposed by Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson following a report from the probation office. Corbin had pleaded guilty to the charge March 17.

He was arrested February 17, after a policeman saw the truck he was driving weaving on the road in the 3400 block of Benning rd. ne. Police said, when Corbin was stopped, he stumbled out from the driver's seat and a whisky bottle fell out behind him.

Records show that although Corbin had only two minor traffic violations to his discredit, he had been charged with drunk 25 times and disorderly 16 times since 1941.

Navy Chief, Just Retired, Dies in Crash

A Navy chief boatswain's mate who retired from active service last Monday was killed about 1 a. m. yesterday when his automobile overturned near Oxon Hill, Md.

Mr. Merritt

The victim, Arthur G. Merritt, 44, of 525 14th st. ne., was declared dead at the scene by Dr. James I. Boyd, Prince Georges County medical examiner.

News of Merritt's retirement first came to his family when papers in his possession were examined after the accident, his uncle, George Arendes, said. He continued to wear his uniform until the day of the accident, the uncle added.

Arendes, with whom the Merritt family lived, said his nephew left the home during the afternoon.

The accident occurred at Livingston rd. and Indian Head hwy. The vehicle left the road, skidded some 200 feet and rolled over, Prince Georges County police said. They theorized Merritt fell from the door during the skid and that the car passed over him.

A native of Greenbackville, Va., he served in the Navy for 22 years. He saw convoy duty in the Atlantic Ocean for 14 months during the past war, Arendes said. He had made his home in Washington for the past 11 years.

John Rohrssen, 58, Dies of Heart Attack

John Rohrssen, 58, of 329 Branch ave., Silver Spring, retired machinist for the Naval Ordnance Laboratory and resident of Washington and vicinity for 25 years, died of a heart attack at his home Thursday night.

Born in Jersey City, N. J., he lived there until 1915 when he moved to northern New York State. He was retired from the Navy Department two years ago. Since then he had been working for various Washington firms as a machinist. He was a member of the Machinists' Union Local 174.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Irene Rohrssen, he is survived by a daughter, Miss Alma Louise Rohrssen; a son, Eugene Henry Rohrssen, both of the Branch ave. address; another son, Richard J. Rohrssen, 4309 Quarles st. ne., and a sister, Mrs. M. R. Purdy, Green, N. Y. Funeral arrangements have

Pony Ride Highlights Janney Jamboree

Charles Del Vecchio—The Washington Post

HI, HO! SILVER—When the Janney School jamboree, held on the school playground, Wisconsin ave. and Albmarle st. nw., got under way yesterday it wasn't long before the young cowhands had decided that the pony ride was the best attraction. The frolic was sponsored by the P-TA and there were grab bags, fortune telling, a magic act, hobby show and a doll show to keep the children active. Nicky Fratt, 5, of 4409 Yuma st. nw., is aboard Peanuts whose services for the afternoon were donated by The Pony Ring, Georgia ave. and Piney Branch rd. nw.

U. S. Attorney Admits Chat With Jurors in Trial Recess

An Assistant United States Attorney acknowledged on the witness stand yesterday that he had chatted with jurors during recesses of a case he was trying.

The admission was made by Prosecutor Harold Bacon during a hearing before Judge David A. Pine for a new trial sought by two men charged with a yoke-robbery here.

Judge Pine, after hearing evidence on Bacon's conversations for the entire day, continued the case until Monday to allow the Government to cite authorities in support of its position that the defendants' rights were not prejudiced.

Speaking of Bacon's actions, Judge Pine said that he was convinced that the prosecutor "had no improper intent and has a reputation for being a fair and vigorous prosecutor."

The conversations, according to the jurors and Bacon, concerned matters not connected with the trial.

Bacon testified that on certain of the conversations he did not know whether the people he spoke to were "jurors or court hangers-on."

The defendants on trial during the chats were George E. Duncan, 23, of 3004 17th st. ne., and Edward E. Ryan, 25, of 1013 8th st. nw. They were convicted of the $62 yoke-robbery of Earl J. Donnelly, of 1116 16th st. nw.

District Court jurists, because of the crowded conditions at the courthouse where jurors must mingle with witnesses, lawyers and defendants in the hallways have long feared that a case like this would someday arise.

"I know the physical situation here is terrible," said the judge. "It is awfully hard not to have conversations with a juror without being rude to him. A lawyer should say 'you can't talk to me' if he is approached by a juror. That is what I would do."

Poll Tax Data Explained to Virginia Voters

Nearby Virginia tax officials yesterday gave details on payment of delinquent poll taxes, due by midnight today from citizens who want to vote in the 1950 primaries or general election.

The annual $1.50 capitation tax, plus penalties and interest, must be paid for the years 1947, 1948 and 1949 for voting eligibility this fall.

Capitation taxes can be mailed in by midnight today. Total amount now due on an unpaid 1947 tax is $1.75, including penalties and interest. A total of $1.66 is due now on the 1948 poll tax, and $1.58 is due on the 1949 poll tax.

Minimum Pay Law for Men Opposed Here

Washington employer groups yesterday told the Senate District Committee they oppose a bill for applying the provisions of the District minimum wage law to men.

The law now applies to women and minors.

The bill was indorsed by labor spokesmen, and by a representative of the Federal Department of Labor. Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West reported District Commissioners have had no opinion on the bill's effect on private industry, and said the measure does not apply to the District or Federal Governments.

Miss Carrie L. Allgood, secretary of the District minimum wage board, told the committee the bill would extend the coverage of the minimum wage law here from about 75,000 persons to about 210,000 persons. She said the agency has sought funds for an increased staff, and that an even larger staff would be needed under the proposed law.

Testifyinug for the bill were Miss Beatrice McConnell, of the Federal Labor Department, and spokesmen for theater and restaurant employe unions. The bill has the backing of the Washington Central Labor Union, AFL.

Opposing the bill were spokesmen for the Washington Board of Trade, and other employer groups, including hotels, apartments, restaurants, builders, drug stores, banks and others.

Science Keeps You Young

Fear of Age Makes You Older

By Ida Jean Kain

This is the sixth in a series of 12 articles on keeping young.

THE ONE secret women want to keep is their age. What's back of this reluctance to own up to the years, Is it vanity . . . dread of age . . . professional reasons? Or is it deeper?

Fundamentally, the resistance to age-telling is protective instinct. In America we have put such a premium on glorious youth that the years after 40 are unattractive in comparison. Small wonder women are cagey on the birthday score.

Whether or not keeping age a secret helps a woman to stay young remains a debatable question. I put it to a doctor, fully expecting him to scoff. To my surprise, he said he thinks maybe it does, but added that he wished they wouldn't try to fool him..

ON THE OTHER HAND Dr. George Lawton, an able authority who has written a book "Aging Successfully," believes one of the best ways to avoid the mental hazard of mounting birthdays is to admit we are growing older and not try to keep age a secret. He contends that the woman who can come right out and say, "I'm 55" has lifted a big load off her shoulders.

I have great respect for Dr. Lawton's views—still, let's be reasonable about this. With the accent on youth, I seriously doubt that it would be a good idea for a business woman to bounce into the boss' office and announce gaily that she will be 55 come Tuesday! He'd probably begin looking for mistakes in her work.

Which brings us right back to the erroneous idea that birthdays subtract from a woman's ability, charm and looks. It's time we put a premium on the advantages that can come with living—mature judgment, truer values, a richer philosophy—and stop putting valuable workers on the shelf.

Even Hollywood Is Growing Up

AS FOR the notion that women cannot become lovelier looking with the years—that ridiculous. We all know women who become more beautiful as the years go by.

Even Hollywood is growing up on the subject of age. It's an open secret that many of the all-time favorites are 40 and past—Claudette Colbert, Irene Dunne, Marlene Dietrich, Greer Garson, Madeleine Carroll, Myrna Loy, Jeanette MacDonald, Barbara Stanwyck, Jean Arthur, Joan Crawford, Bette Davis, Katherine Hepburn—and they seem to get lovelier every year. Many glamorous actresses are past 50, and close-ups prove them still beautifully young—look at Gloria Swanson. And Billie Burke!

To tell or not to tell age is really not the question. The important thing is not to let birthdays weigh on the mind, or allow them to become a touchy subject. Pointed questions can be turned aside with a quip. Ignore the years blithely if you like . . . just don't make a fetish of guarding age. It's the fear of age that is harmful.

How do you feel about all this? Let's take a national poll. Do you think women mind telling their age, and why? Do you think it helps them feel younger to keep it a secret? If you have a minute, drop me a line in care of this newspaper. They'll forward it, and I'll report to you. No names or ages will be mentioned.

GLORIA SWANSON . . . past 50, says, "Age isn't a woman's enemy—only the fear of age."

Pakistan Chief Host To Capital Notables At Brilliant Fete

By Elizabeth Maguire

A BRILLIANT reception was held last evening in honor of the Prime Minister of Pakistan and Begum Liaquat Ali Khan. Attending the white tie event, which was given by the Ambassador of Pakistan and Mme. Ispahani, were President and Mrs. Truman, top officials of the land and chiefs of mission.

They began arriving at the Grand Ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel at 10 p. m.

So many guests—almost 800—were there it took half an hour to go through the receiving line and when the line broke up toward 11, there were still about a quarter of the guests who hadn't yet shaken hands with the Trumans, the Prime Minister and the Begum and the Ambassador and Mme. Ispahani.

As the receiving line disbanded, Mrs. Truman walked with the Prime Minister and sat with him at a small table. The President, escorting the Begum, lost sight of Mrs. Truman for a moment, spied her through the crowd and said "she put one over on me," as he and the Begum laughingly joined the First Lady and the Prime Minister.

Mrs. Truman wore a gray lace dress with red sash and the Begum was an enchanting figure in a gray garara with gold and orange tunic and silver dupatta or shawl.

Among the guests who missed out on the receiving line was the Soviet Ambassador who soon found himself caught up in the swirl of guests.

The buffet was so lavish it was overwhelming. The tables, massed with flowers of all colors, were laden with lobster, curried dishes, hams, turkeys, salads, cakes and several kinds of ice cream.

Guests from White House circles were Mr. and Mrs. John Steelman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ross, Gen. and Mrs. Harry Vaughan and Gen. and Mrs. Robert B. Landry.

The British combined staff was represented by Air Marshall Lord Tedder and Lady Tedder, Admiral Sir Frederick Dalrymple Hamilton and Miss Christiana Dalrymple Hamilton, General Sir Neil and Lady Ritchie and Sir George and Lady Pirie.

Generals Omar Bradley, J. Lawton Collins and Hoyt Vandenberg represented the United States military forces.

Glimpsed among the guests was pretty Miss Anne Warren, daughter of Ambassador to Pakistan Ava Warren, who will join her parents in Kurachi in June when she has completed her sophomore year at Bryn Mawr College.

Madame Pandit, Ambassador from India was there, wearing a lovely white sari. The Italian Ambassador and Signora Tarchiani were there and Senora de Dillon, wife of the Ambassador from Ecuador was seen in a dawn pink satin gown. Senhora Rocheta, wife of the counselor at the Portuguese Embassy, wore midnight blue.

Among the guests were Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, Senators who visited Pakistan last year, including Senators Allen Ellender, Theodore Green, Homer Ferguson and William E. Jenner accompanied by Mrs. Ferguson and Mrs. Jenner.

Prominent among the guests was Mrs. Paul Alling, widow of the first United States Ambassador to Pakistan.

The crew of President Truman's plane, Independence, was there. Accompanied by their wives were Col. W. F. Williams, pilot; Maj. E. S. Smith, copilot; Capt. E. B. Christensen, navigator; and Engineer Gene Lucas.

Members of the Cabinet were there with their wives, as were members of the congressional Foreign Relations Committees.

Gay Embassy Party Celebrates Crowning of Thailand's King

By Marie McNair

A SLENDER boyish King, Phumiphon Adulet, who writes popular music and plays the saxophone, was crowned yesterday in Thailand, just a week after he took a pretty 17-year-old Thai princess as his bride. Temple bells rang, and a fleet of airplanes zoomed overhead as the ceremonies took place under a nine-tiered ceremonial umbrella in the Royal Palace. The festivities will last three days.

In Washington yesterday there was a large reception at the Thailand Embassy. Hosts were the Ambassador, Prince Wan Waithayakon and Princess Wan, she wearing a royal purple costume with gold necklace set with emeralds.

The embassy, newly decorated—with pale mauve walls downstairs and pale pink in the drawing room suite—was a perfect background for the masses of pink dogwood throughout the house. A tree—well almost—filled the stairwell with pink blossoms. There were tall sprays in the drawing room and the dining room where the buffet offered cold lobster and shrimp, hot baby sausages and the usual cocktail hour accompaniments.

Everybody was talking about the heat of the afternoon. Some few actually did something about it and went out into the garden. A good many from the Diplomatic Corps turned out for the party, headed by Mme. Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Ambassador and Dean of the Corps, who wore a dark blue silk suit, a tiny pink hat, and carried a fur over her arm.

The Soviet Ambassador, Alexander Panyushkin, came alone and soon took his leave. Mme. Pandit, Indian Ambassador, wore a spring sari of hyacinth blue threaded in silver; Mme. Corea, wife of the Ceylonese envoy, had wrapped herself in a red and gold sari.

Miss Carolina Nabuco, sister of the Brazilian Ambassador, had been earlier to the ladies' tea given by Senora de Herbruger, wife of the Panama Ambassador; so had Mrs. Robert Guggenheim who joined her husband at the Thai Embassy.

Mrs. Wade Haislip, in a tan and white polka dot frock, had been among Mrs. Joseph Davies' luncheon guests earlier in the day, and met her hostess again at the coronation reception. A symphony in brown, Mrs. Davies wore a deep brown satin gown, a fur stole and sweeping cocoa brown paradise birds on her hat.

Representative Frances P. Bolton, who lives next door, arrived hatless in a dark blue suit; Mrs. George Neilson wore the biggest white hat I've seen this season, and Mme. Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, had one of the tiniest, a spray of white lilacs trailing at one shoulder.

Others there were the Australian Ambassador, Norman Makin, Col. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Mrs. Biddle in soft black taffeta with a wide black hat; the Syrian Minister and Mme. El-Khouri, the Philippine Ambassador Joaquin Elizalde, and the Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann.

Panama Tea Honors Caribbean Military Chief

THE small tea at the Panama Embassy where the doors were thrown open to the terrace and the trees, was in honor of Mrs. W. H. H. Morris, whose husband, Lieutenant General Morris, is Commander in Chief of the Caribbean area. The Morrises, here until Sunday, will be in New York for several days before returning by boat to Panama.

Yesterday Senora de Herbruger wore chocolate brown, the skirt of taffeta, the bodice of lace over shell pink. Mrs. Morris' tiny white straw cloche was an effective contrast to her black frock.

Senora de Castro, wife of the Costa Rican Ambassador, was a guest, and others were suntanned Mrs. Paul Daniels, wife of our Ambassador to the OAS, in a blue and white print; Mrs. Alexander Surles, wearing red poppies on her hat; Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Mrs. Edward H. Conger, Mrs. W. Tapley Bennett, Mrs. Dennis Chavez, Mrs. Maurice Thatcher and Mme. Grace Espaillat.

Fosketts Are Hosts At Dinner Party

REAR ADMIRAL and Mrs. James H. Foskett entertained at dinner last evening, the first in a series of parties they have planned for the spring season.

Gen. Jesare Lavera, head of the Italian Military Mission in Washington, and Comdr. Ugo Giudice of the Italian Naval Mission, were among the guests. Others were Gen. Marc Foullien, Belgian's permanent representative to the standing group of the North Atlantic Pact; Brig. Gen. Jean Piatte, French representative to the Atlantic Pact group; Mme. Piatte and their daughter, Mlle Monique Piatte; Lieut. Col. Jean de Rougemont, also a member of the French delegation to the Atlantic Pact group, with Mme. de Rougemont.

Also Capt W. Gordon Beecher, USN, and Mrs. Beecher; Mrs. Carolyn Hagner Shaw, Miss Eva Stoles, Paul Garrison and Miss Margaret Kane Foskett, daughter of the hosts.

Mrs. Lewis to Tell Fortunes At Tolstoy Benefit

MRS. JAMES HAMILTON LEWIS — Gypsy Lewis to her friends—will tell fortunes at the Tolstoy Foundation benefit cocktail party from 5 to 8 p. m. today at the Murray Galleries in Georgetown. Proceeds of the entertainment will go to victims of communism. There will be Russian singing and dancing and attractive door prizes including a fitted bag, perfume, an order for a hat, credit cards for a photograph. In addition imported Dutch tulip and hyacinth bulbs will be on sale.

Dinner Dance Honors Senora de Espil

MR. AND MRS. CURTIS MUNson entertained at a dinner dance last night at the 1925 F Street Club in honor of Senora de Espil, wife of the former Argentine Ambassador, who arrived yesterday to be their guests for several days.

Senora de Espil, the former Miss Courtney Letts of Washington, has been in Tarrytown, N. Y. to see her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Leighton.

UN Club Program to Honor Indian Arts

MRS. B. K. NEHRU, wife of the Counselor of the Indian Embassy, will be honor guest today at a program at the United Nations Club honoring India in her arts and handicrafts.

From 4 to 8 p. m. there will be a display of Indian handicraft, and from 6:30 to 8:30 a special Indian curry dinner will be served in the Flag Room of the club. The program, including Indian films, will commence at 9 p. m.

Mrs. D. S. Sawkar is hostess for the evening. The events are under the chairmanship of Miss Celia Conway.

Mrs. Claude G. Bowers Is Luncheon Guest

MRS. JOSEPH DAVIES entertained at luncheon yesterday for Mrs. Claude G. Bowers, wife of the United States Ambassador to Chile, who is in town for several days. Also at the luncheon was Mrs. Bowers' daughter, Miss Patricia Bowers. There were 35 guests.

The Minister of Finland and Mme. Jutila and their daughter, Miss Vappu Jutila have left for Cornell University for a stay of several days. The Minister will give a lecture on agriculture and economic conditions in postwar Finland to the university seminar on Monday. On Wednesday he will speak on the same subject at the Rotary Club in Ithaca.

Flower Mart Draws Nats' Star, First Lady, Author

MRS. TRUMAN and Sam Dente, shortstop for the Washington Nats, were the outstanding guests at the Flower Mart yesterday at the Washington Cathedral on Mount St. Alban.

The First Lady of the Land was one of the very first to arrive of the some 5000 persons who attended the colorful fair.

And the popular infielder, Mr. Dente, was on hand to autograph balls at the baseball booth down on the other side of the hemlock hedge on the Oak Grove of the Cathedral close.

Author Autographs Book

VISITORS were flocking about the book booth, too, when author John Mason Brown arrived to autograph copies of his sellsellers.

The great lawn of the Cathedral was covered with just about every attraction imaginable.

There were train and pony rides, goldfish and turtles for the thousands of school children and all kinds of flowers, homemade pastries and candies.

A corps of Campfire Girls, assisted by a nurse, managed a baby-sitting booth for Flower Mart shoppers. And there was also a booth where postcards and letters could be addressed, canceled with a specially designed cachet and mailed in a special box.

Booth Wins Blue Ribbon

SEVERAL of the booths proudly displayed prize ribbons. The Boutonniere Booth was adorned with a blue ribbon for winning first place in the flower contest.

Mrs. Francis Johnstone and Mrs. Denys Smith were co-chairmen of the booth. Second place went to the Garden Club of Fairfax for an authentic reproduction of a Victorian garden. Its chairmen were Mrs. William C. Peck and Mrs. Edward H. Howrey. Mrs. Charles Hamilton Maddox of the Trowel Club received the third place ribbon for her booth which resembled a flower cart.

Hats Made of Trinkets

THE CATHEDRAL Mementoes Booth, trimmed with morning glories and ivy, took first place honors in the miscellaneous class. Mrs. John Bayless was the chairman. The Hat Trimming Booth, where ladies took turns making new hats from a collection of flowers, ribbons and trinkets, came in second. Its chairman was Mrs. Curtis Munson.

MRS. HARRY TRUMAN was one of the very first to arrive at the Flower Mart yesterday in the Oak Grove of the Washington Cathedral on Mount St. Alban. She was greeted by Mrs. G. Howland Chase, president of All Hallows' Guild which sponsors the annual fair. Upon her arrival at 11 a. m. Mrs. Truman awarded blue, red and white ribbons to the most distinctive booths which covered the lawn in front of the Cathedral. The Boutonniere Booth was first prize winner of all the flower stands, and the Cathedral Mementos booth won out in the miscellaneous category

FLOWERS ON HORSEBACK were a feature of one of the colorful booths at the Flower Mart yesterday at Washington Cathedral. Mrs. Elsie Hunter of Cabin John, Md., shows the exhibit to her youngsters, Barry and Rita. More than 5000 persons visited the gay fair given by the ladies of All Hallow's Guild

Critic Asks More Honesty in Literature

John Mason Brown, author and drama critic, yesterday pleaded for more honesty in literature and the drama. In a talk entitled "Seeing Things," which former Kentuckian Brown gave before a group of Washingtonians to raise funds for the Frontier Nursing Service and its training school in Kentucky, Mr. Brown said Hollywood movies were improving in this matter.

However, foreign films still do better than American pictures, he said, explaining that in European films the suggestion is that the events happened to real people and could happen to you. In American films, the story is about something that never happened to anybody and could never possibly happen to you, he said.

Following Mr. Brown's lecture in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom, refreshments were served in an adjoining room. Guests included Mrs. Truman, Mrs. Tom Clark, Mrs. Fred Vinson, Mrs. Harold Burton, Mrs. Clark Clifford and Senora de Echegaray, wife of the agricultural attache at the Spanish Embassy.

Also Mrs. Russell True, Mrs. David B. Karrich, Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth, Mrs. Pinkney Love and Mrs. Paul Gillespie.

Present also were some Washington women who have served as volunteer couriers in the mountain areas where the nurses travel by horseback to inaccessible parts of the country, on missions for the Frontier Nursing Service established by Mrs. Mary Breckinridge.

Argo Luncheon Will Honor Henry Monsky

Rabbi Arthur Lelyveld, National Hillel director, will be the principal speaker at the B'nai B'rith Women, Argo, spring installation luncheon on May 8 at 12 noon at the Hotel Statler.

At the luncheon the chapter will honor the memory of the late Henry Monsky, Jewish leader who served as national president of B'nai B'rith from 1938 until his sudden death in 1947. Mrs. Monsky will be an honor guest. The supreme lodge in April voted to erect a B'nai B'rith foundation in Washington to be called the Henry Monsky Foundation. The first project of the foundation will be a B'nai B'rith building, which will serve as headquarters for the supreme lodge and council.

The Four Freedoms Memorial Library, which the women of B'nai B'rith started in 1945 as a memorial to Franklin D. Roosevelt, will become a reality in the Monsky Foundation.

A playlet entitled "The Man From Omaha," based on a former broadcast of "The Eternal Light," a radio network show, will be presented under the direction of Mrs. Karl Flocks.

Mrs. Raymond Sterling is chairman of the luncheon. Chairman of the foundation building fund is Mrs. A. Samuel Feldman. Mrs. Theodore Shapiro has been reelected as president of Argo Chapter for the year 1950-1951.

One on the Aisle—

A Superior Yarn Out of Civil War

By Richard L. Coe

THE CAPITOL HAS a well-above-par Civil War story in "The Outriders," which stars Joel McCrae, Arleen Dahl and Barry Sullivan. Filmed in the canyon settings of Utah, it's also a fine example of Technicolor.

Little in history has captured imaginations both here and abroad as have the limitless stories of Civil War days. It is, perhaps, a personal taste that makes me especially interested in what some folks still call the War Between the States, but I've noticed I'm part of a great majority having such a feeling.

It is to that section of the fans that Metro tosses this three-bagger. Quantrill's Missouri raiders are at the end of their ragged rope when the picture starts. We watch Confederates McCrea, Sullivan and James Whitmore kill a guard and get away from their Union captors. For a while they think they're in the grease again, but their next captors turn out to be Quantrill's men. (They made a serious slip-up by describing Shiloh as the Pittsburg Massacre.)

Those backwash villains, plying on sympathy for the Confederacy, are out to grab a million dollars in gold that Ramon Novarro is piloting to St. Louis from Mexico for Lee's Army. They force the fleeing trio to join the wagon train, since McCrea knows the territory. The idea is to guide the gold into Quantrill's territory, where Henchman Jeff Corey will make off with the loot and the devil take the Conderacy.

Irving Ravetch first told this as a magazine serial and one assumes his research is reliable enough to make the yarn true. At all events, it seems so, thanks especially to the fine Technicolored camera work of Charles Schoenbaum.

Miss Dahl gets into the game by being along on the wagon train to take her young brother-in-law back to his family after her husband's death. Romance breaks up friendship between McCrea and Sullivan and things come out on those lines as you'd expect.

The playing is exactly right, especially James Whitmore, once again lurking behind makeup moss. A young fellow, Whitmore's likely to get himself typed a la Walter Brennan. A word, too, for Andre Previn's music. It's a bit obtrusive, mayhap, but he's found four socko notes that work into a quite a thing.

"THE OUTRIDERS." M.-G.-M. release produced by Richard Goldstone. Story and screen play by Irving Ravetch. Photographed in Technicolor by Charles Schoenbaum. Music by Andre Previn. Directed by Roy Rowland. At the Capitol.

THE WAR'S ALMOST OVER: Joel McCrea and Arleen Dahl in "The Outriders," the Capitol's new adventure film about an outpost of Civil War action

LEW PARKER headlines the Capitol stage bill . . . It's practically a second home to the comic, who's just completed two seasons of touring opposite Beatrice Lillie in "Inside U. S. A.," demanding task for any male comic . . . He's unscathed.

"STANDBY" is a term newly important in the live theater, where "understudy" used to be the word; a "standby" ranks higher than a mere understudy and, judging from phone calls, many are the Washingtonians who've seen standbys take over for Ezio Pinza in "South Pacific," Leo Cobb in "Death of a Salesman" or Alfred Drake in "Kiss Me, Kate." . . . At the Mayflower on a honeymoon trip is Ted Scott, who's scored handsomely every time he's taken over for Drake in the merry musical . . . Ted's bride is Cynthia Riseley, a dancer of "Kate" and other top musicals . . . They were married Thursday afternoon, with Claudette Colbert looking on, after Ted played the week's first four performances of "Kate." . . . Many's the time I've been told Ted was fine in the part and here's hoping the next role will be his own . . . Long life, kids.

THE NEW PLAZA'S doing fine, with Manager Jimmy Matthews especially pleased with that new "seat check" system . . . "Working like a charm," he reports . . . The idea is that on crowded nights each patron is given a numbered check and waits for his number to be called in the lounge below the theater . . . Where there's a television set facing cozy seats . . . Jimmy's learned something else: "Golly, do people like coffee!"

FIFI d'ORSAY'S in town (as if you didn't know) and there's no one like Fifi . . . The Montreal-born comedienne, who oooh-la-las lahdier than any Frenchwoman, is at the Club Kavakos . . . For a while Fifi tried tending to housework, but she couldn't use up enough steam . . . It's okay with Hubby Ricky La Ricos, who's now her manager.

MURIEL MADDOX, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Charles H. Maddox, 2446 Belmont rd. nw., has been signed by Columbia Pictures for a featured part in "That Bedside Manner," with Larry Parks and Barbara Hale . . . You'll see her first in UA's "The Men," the Veterans' Administration picture soon to be released.

The MacARTHUR Theater, beginning Monday, will be a full-fledged K-B house . . . For several years the comparatively new house has been jointly operated by Warners and K-B, but now much legal entanglement has been cleared away and the Kogod-Boucher chain will have complete control . . . Charles Demma of the Apex will be temporary manager of the spot on MacArthur blvd. at U st. nw.

Father, Son Save Second Set From Train

A police dispatcher and his train clerk father yesterday received congratulations for their split-second teamwork that saved another father and son, stalled on the railroad tracks late Thursday night.

At 11:49 p.m. Pvt. James M. Lynch, land lines communicator of the Police Department, got a call that a car had broken through a barricade at 9th and Taylor sts., ne., by the B & O tracks.

Lynch called his father, Joseph F. Lynch, at Union station, who knew that the Shenandoah express bound for Chicago had just left. A scout car rushed to the scene.

The elder Lynch called one tower. The train had passed.

A second call to a farther tower halted the train less than 500 yards from the car in which Jesse C. Houston, 69, of 4125 4th st., nw., and his son, James, 5008 4th st., nw., were sitting.

The Houstons were arrested, charged with intoxication and trespassing. They elected to forfeit $25 collateral on each charge.

1000 Birds Electrocuted

La Junta, Colo., May 5 (AP).—About 1000 sparrows and finches were electrocuted this morning in Courthouse Park. Power lines sagged against the wet tree branches used by the birds as a roost.

Board Votes Suspension of Police Private

A police trial board yesterday unanimously recommended the dismissal of Pvt. Raymond E. Bright, Second Precinct, from the Metropolitan Police Force.

Bright, 39, a member of the department for nine years, was convicted of feigning illness to avoid duty.

According to testimony before the trial board, Bright was due at the precinct station at 3:30 p. m. April 26.

When he failed to appear, a corporal called him at his home. Bright, it was said, reported he had fallen asleep and promised to be at the station in a few minutes.

Three minutes later, it was charged, he called the station, said he was ill and requested sick leave.

Shortly afterward, Bright was examined at his home by a police surgeon. The latter reported him well and fit for duty.

At yesterday's proceedings testimony was introduced that Bright was examined the day after the first examination by a private doctor and found to be suffering from colitis, an intestinal ailment.

The board's recommendation will be forwarded to Maj. Robert J. Barrett, police superintendent, and the District Commissioners for final action. Bright lives at 54 M st. nw.

The Gallup Poll

Less Than Half of U. S. Women Find Housework Is a Pleasure

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 5.—How much pleasure or satisfaction do women get out of housework?

Fewer than half say they get a lot of satisfaction from it in a national survey just conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion. About one in every five definitely says that she gets very little enjoyment from it. The rest take a more or less neutral view, expressing neither strong like nor dislike.

Whatever her feelings are on the subject, housework is something about which virtually every U. S. woman has some opinion. Only 3 out of every 100 interviewed were undecided.

The survey was conducted as a companion piece to another recent survey dealing with the amount of pleasure or satisfaction which people employed full-time in factories, offices, on farms, and so forth, get out of their work.

All women in the survey were asked:

"How much pleasure and satisfaction do you get out of your housework—a lot, a fair amount, or very little?"

The vote:

A lot	46%
Fair amount	34
Very little	17
Undecided	3
	100%

Women who are employed in full-time jobs (not including housework) get somewhat less satisfaction out of housework than women who do not have jobs outside the home. Forty-seven percent of the non-working women say they get a lot of pleasure from housework as compared with 43 percent among women who are working in full-time jobs.

The twenty-eighth annual shad bake sponsored by the Takoma Park Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and its ladies auxiliary will be held Sunday from 1 to 4 p. m. at Sligo Cabin on Sligo Creek, Wayne ave. and Sligo Creek pkwy. Silver Spring, Md.

Dental Technician Gets Suspended Jail Sentence

Prince George County Circuit Judge Charles C. Marbury yesterday imposed and then suspended a six-month sentence on a Takoma Park dental technician for practicing dentistry without a license.

Stephen R. Dellavalle heard his sentence suspended on the condition that he not practice dentistry without a license. The technician was convicted April 24 on testimony that showed he made an impression for a set of false teeth for a Mount Rainier man.

Press Group Joins Seminar

The Montgomery County Press Association yesterday voted to participate in the annual journalistic seminar of the Montgomery County Junior College, to be held in the fall.

German Top Reds Reported Set for Moscow Parley

Berlin (Saturday), May 6 (U.P.)—Germany's top Communist leaders have been summoned to Moscow for a secret meeting, usually reliable sources said today.

It was suggested the call might foretell a meeting of the Cominform.

Informants said a Russian plane arrived here yesterday and flew back with East German Minister-President Otto Grotewohl and Walter Ulbright, Deputy Minister-President.

It is understood that President Wilhem Pieck of the Soviet-sponsored East German Government has been in Moscow for several weeks.

FROM THE "BARDOON OF THE WEST" "OUTRIDERS"
They were fast-riding daredevils of the West who accompanied caravans crossing the wilderness. They traveled alone at some distance from the wagon trains to fight off savage Indians or bandits, and to warn of attack . . . young pioneers who knew no fear.

D.C. Highs' Method Of Raising Funds Termed 'Vicious'

The method in which Washington's public high schools raise their athletic funds was termed "vicious" yesterday in a report by Carl A. Truester, jr., executive secretary of the American Association for Health Physical Education and Recreation.

In his report, received by the National Education Association here, Truester attacked the practice of providing schools with athletic equipment out of proceeds from gate receipts. That's the practice of Washington's schools.

"Athletics are . . . an integral part of the secondary-school program and should receive financial support from tax funds on the same basis as other recognized parts of the total education program," he said.

Truester urged rigid regulation of scholastic athletic rules, protection for schoolboy athletes from professional and college offers, and ending of preseason and postseason games and national and interstate championship games and tournaments.

Owner of Falling Bottle Is Guilty In Assault Case

Municipal Court Judge Thomas D. Quinn does not think much of bottles coming out of windows and striking passersby—even accidentally.

As a result, he sentenced Nathanial Evans, 34, of 918½ Desmond ct. sw., to a $50 fine or 30 days in jail on a simple assault charge yesterday.

Police said Othelma L. Garunette, 35, of 324 Allen ct. sw., was struck above the eye with a wine bottle as she passed below Evans' window Thursday night.

Evans said the bottle accidentally fell out. His attorney, Leon Williams, said a pedestrian must use caution in Desmond ct., where bottles might fly anytime.

Said Judge Quinn: "We will stop that now."

Police Raids Net 100 Peep Shows At 11 Arcades

Police yesterday confiscated 100 rolls of "suggestive" peep-show films in raids on 11 amusement arcades and novelty stores.

The raids, conducted by Lieut. Roy Blick and seven members of his vice squad, began a drive to clean up the peep-shows, Blick said.

Owners whose films were taken were warned their machines will be confiscated if later raids revealed more suggestive or nude pictures.

Blick said films were seized at 1206, 1219 and 1223 New York ave. nw., 1211 Pennsylvania ave. nw., and the following addresses on Ninth st. nw.: 412, 416, 436, 413, 419, 433 and 515.

NOTHING BUT THE BEST
went into the construction of this charming solid brick Colonial that was planned for gracious living. Situated on a beautifully wooded and shrubbed corner which measures 80x140 in a good N. Arlington location. The first floor is a perfectly charming living room, 30 ft. in length with fireplace and lots of windows. The 14x13 dining room is formal and most attractive. The grand 12x13 kitchen is as modern as tomorrow with scads of custom-built cabinets, stainless steel drainboards, fluorescent lights, exhaust fans, etc. A 13x13 bedroom or library and full tiled bath. There are 4 delightfully sized bedrooms with magnificent closet space and 2 baths on the 2d floor. The 3d floor is practically finished into 2 rooms, one 14x22, the other 13x14. The basement is full and dry with a ½ bath. A few of the details that make this home outstanding: 2 telephone connections, 118 electrical outlets, all-copper plumbing, drains and flashings, Buckingham slate roof, attached brick garage, stone barbecue pit, combination screens and storm windows throughout. The list is endless. The home is completely custom built and only 2 years old. It could not possibly be reproduced for under $40,000 and yet the price is only $32,500. Shown by appointment only through the office of

Top of the Morning
The first ray of sunlight will cause Mother Nature in all her glory to awaken with an enchanted glow. Visualize sparkling dewdrops as though they were diamonds, clinging to each blade of grass, birds singing and the aroma of roses covering the trellis car port. Truly an architect builder created the brick bungalow that goes with the setting. Adjoining the flower-covered car port is lovely screened porch with doorway to charming living room, 2 twin-sized bedrooms, tiled bath, dining room, equipped kitchen, full basement, and expansion attic. Total price only $14,750.

3 BEAUTIFUL HILLS

About a mile frontage on River and Bradley rds., overlooking Congressional Country Club. One of these hills has the more perfect setting for a home than any other property around Greater Washington. The setting for this home is more beautiful than Mr. Truman's White House or George Washington's Mount Vernon home. This homesite has been withdrawn from the market. I'm building my own home on this beautiful setting. Mr. James E. Elkins, among the best builders in Montgomery County, is constructing this home. Ride up on the hill and look at the construction and compare it with anything you have ever seen around Washington. A 35,000-lb. bulldozer has been pushing down trees that are 2 feet in diameter. When I compare this beautiful setting with many other homes around Washington, where people have murdered their own money because they didn't know how to select a perfect setting for their home, come out and look at this beautiful setting—it won't cost you anything. Two adjoining hills of about 30 acres each can be had at 15c a sq. ft. There is one 5-acre lot where River rd. and Bradley rd. join which can be had at 20c a sq. ft. You can reach me at my home, WO. 0933, Fulton R. Gordon, owner. Brokers, attention.

'Honest' People Steal

Embezzlement Signals Noted

This is the last of a series of articles about embezzling in America.

By Kenneth L. Hall

CHAPTER SIX

Most American businessmen pride themselves on their efficiency. Yet they will often hire a family man deep in debt, pay him a small salary, then give him the job of playing caddy to the firm's cash.

When the poor fellow is discovered to have tapped the till for a six-figure sum, everybody says, "What a shame — Horace seemed like such a nice person." And he was nice. Also honest—up to the day when the "pressure" of his private life became too great for him to resist.

What did the boss expect when he figuratively left a loaf of bread within arm's reach of a starving man?

Human beings, like any other piece of construction, are subject to stresses and strains. If there's a weakness, it's bound to show under certain conditions. The breakdown could often be prevented by some bolstering in the right places at the right time.

J. Edgar Hoover, whose ubiquitous FBI has put the clutch on many an embezzler, has listed the danger signals for which employers should be on the alert.

Hoover recently issued a pamphlet, "Suggestions for Protection" which was distributed to banks and insurance companies by the National Surety Corporation.

Watch out, say G-Man Hoover, when an employe is forced to make large alimony payments.

Beware if he buys an excessive amount of insurance, plays the stock market, buys a costly home, does too much drinking or horse-playing.

Watch out if he has recently had to pay large hospital or medical bills. Or if he has bought a Buick when you know he's making a Ford salary. Look skeptically at his business "on the side."

Double the Guard

Double the guard if he (and particularly she) blossoms forth with a flashy new wardrobe, or announces plans for a Carribbean cruise when you know he's been having trouble finding bus fare.

Speaking of vacations, be doubly suspicious of the employe who refuses to take one. It's a dead giveaway, says Hoover, when the fellow, or gal, is afraid to leave the job for fear he'll be discovered.

A typical case of this kind is told by W. J. Nichols of Detroit's Standard Accident Insurance Co.

"Ann Smith," unmarried, had been bookkeeper at a Midwestern bank for 33 years. She earned $2700 a year. Bank officials regarded her as one of their best, most conscientious bookkeepers. What they didn't know was that Miss Smith was working on the books as well at them.

For years she had refused to take a vacation. Finally she was persuaded by well-meaning friends to go on a trip. While she was away, Miss Smith's worst fears were realized. Auditors found she had been gathering up the green to the tune of $150,000.

Where had the money gone? On personal luxury items, for the most part. She had also bought perfumes and furs for friends. Over a five-year period she had spent $26,000 in an obscure tavern. Another $7000 went for taxis, tips, and first-class restaurants.

As in most embezzlement cases, most of the money was gone when the day of reckoning—by auditors, that is—arrived. And as in most cases, too, bank officials found it hard to believe that this quiet, capable, hard-working employe had fouled up the books for such a tidy sum.

A few banks give lie-detector tests periodically to employes.

An ironic story about a lie detector concerns the president of a small-town bank near Chicago.

"Inside" Job

The bank had been robbed of cash and bonds and an "inside" job was suspected. A well-meaning local judge suggested the lie detector be used. The mere suggestion cleared up the case immediately. Fearing to face the machine, the guilty president killed himself.

Another important preventive against embezzlement is the blanket fidelity bond. This bond insures the honesty of employes and guarantees to repay the employer for amounts embezzled by bonded workers.

Fidelity bonds are not in the mere barn-door-locking class for one very good reason. Surety companies do not bond employes until they have made thorough investigations.

If facts are found that are out of line with an employe's mode of life, the employer is notified. Bonds have been withheld because a bank teller was paid too low a salary to be a good risk. Or because a cashier was known to have an eager interest in the improvement of the breed of race horses. Or if his associates are people of bad reputation.

Strangely enough, bonding is known to have a good moral effect on employes for no other reason than that they know they are bonded.

The American businessman can do something to protect himself from the crippling cost of embezzlements.

First, he should become familiar with the personal problems of his employes. In large companies, this is unusually done at the supervisory level. Remove the cause for embezzlement and you remove the deed . . . for we know that 99.44 percent of embezzlers are are basically honest, noncriminal types.

Second, he should take advantage of mechanical means—better auditing, lie detectors, internal security systems—to protect his business from without as well as within.

Third, he should use blanket fidelity bonds to help prevent and, if necessary, to pay for losses through employe dishonesty.

True losses through embezzlement cannot be computed in dollars alone. It is the obligation of the employer as well as the employe himself to put an end to these crimes by honest men.

Fulfilled, it is an obligation that will save 400 million dollars annually in stolen funds—and at least twice that amount in heartache and regret.

Who's an Authority?

To Err Is Human, Also Inevitable

By Sonia Stein

ONE of the funniest jokes in the New Yorker magazine is printed week after week under the heading, "On the Air." It says, in small type, "Since programs are often changed at the last minute, the newspapers should be consulted as final authority."

Thank you, New Yorker, for your confidence, but newspapers, too, go to press somewhat in advance of the last minute and I for one would hesitate to call them a final authority. In fact, I don't know whom I'd call a final authority. As late as Wednesday afternoon the ABC press information department in both Washington and New York assured me that actress Mary Beth Hughes would be on Thursday night's "Holiday Hotel" as originally announced. The fact that she had flown home to California the preceding Sunday to do a movie role cut no ice.

Naughty of me to have bet with WMAL-TV's press representative that she wouldn't be on, since I'd got the word from Mary Beth backstage at the Milton Berle telethon the preceding Sunday a. m. Nice of me to confine the bet to a dime, though.

But let that make you wary—the final authority in such matters is usually halfway to Honolulu. NEVER stay home to listen to a show purely on the strength of a newspaper's promise. We're just like politicians in this matter.

HANGING around backstage at the Berle show yielded more news than Mary Beth's trips. Since the entertainers had to hang around a matter of an hour or more, just to appear on the air for a minute or two, they were glad to improve the shining hour with a press conference.

Tony Romano and Johnny Bradford, who used to do their delightful NBC musical radio show from here and now do it from New York, have the format of a TV show all worked out. Bradford, you remember, used to do a TV show on WNBW as well as the radio show for the network.

Faye Emerson who appeared twice on the Berle show and played two other benefits the same night, considers herself indestructible. "Sometimes I wish I'd get a little cold or a neat break in the leg so I'd have to go to bed and rest for a while," she says. "A broken wrist wouldn't do it; I'd just put it in a sling and keep working."

Lanny Ross, borrowing a match, discovered he was borrowing it from the same man he'd bummed one off during a camp show in the middle of war. He's excited about his new daily show on Mutual (WEAM, 12:15 p. m.) and has a special show lined up for Friday of next week when mothers all over the country will be invited to "attend" the show.

Watching much of the Berle show from the wings, when he wasn't on the air himself, was Walter Winchell. He seemed fascinated, ducked out just long enough to write part of his Sunday night radio script and hurried back to the Telethon. His own TV style was such a success, his radio sponsor wants him to simulcast the Sunday show, on radio and TV. But curiously, his two air personalities don't quite match. That machine-gun delivery he uses on radio, just isn't there on TV when he is ad libbing.

TONIGHT'S "Dimension X" show (WRC, 8 p. m.) is adapted from the Frederic Brown story, "Knock" which begins: "The last man on earth sat alone in a room. And then—there was a knock on the door!"

RCA says that it will show only its new multi-color single tube TV sets at the Home Builders Show at the National Guard Armory starting May 12. Gen. David Sarnoff, chairman of the RCA board, testified before the FCC this week that RCA could have a trickle of such sets coming off the assembly line about June, 1951. That would be about 200 per week. By the end of the year the figure would be more than 1000 a week, and would rise substantially later, he said. Other manufacturers would also be producing such sets, too, he assumed. The figure sounds large, except in the face of a five million black-and-white set figure predicted for the next year.

You Might Call This a 'Devine' Definition

W. M. Devine of 234 F st. nw. defines a reformer as "a fellow who is too old to have any further interest in the things he's trying to reform."

PERSONAL NOTES

Gus Brensnahan, 12 Ashby st., Alexandria, Va.: I don't blame you for questioning it, but my McCarthy story was correct. Mutual Network programs do originate in the WWDC studios, despite the fact that WEAM is the network's local outlet.

Mrs. Amy Putnam Lesher, 22 K st. nw.: You're right, he's wrong. He says: "Tell Mrs. Lesher I hang my head in shame for not catching the error."

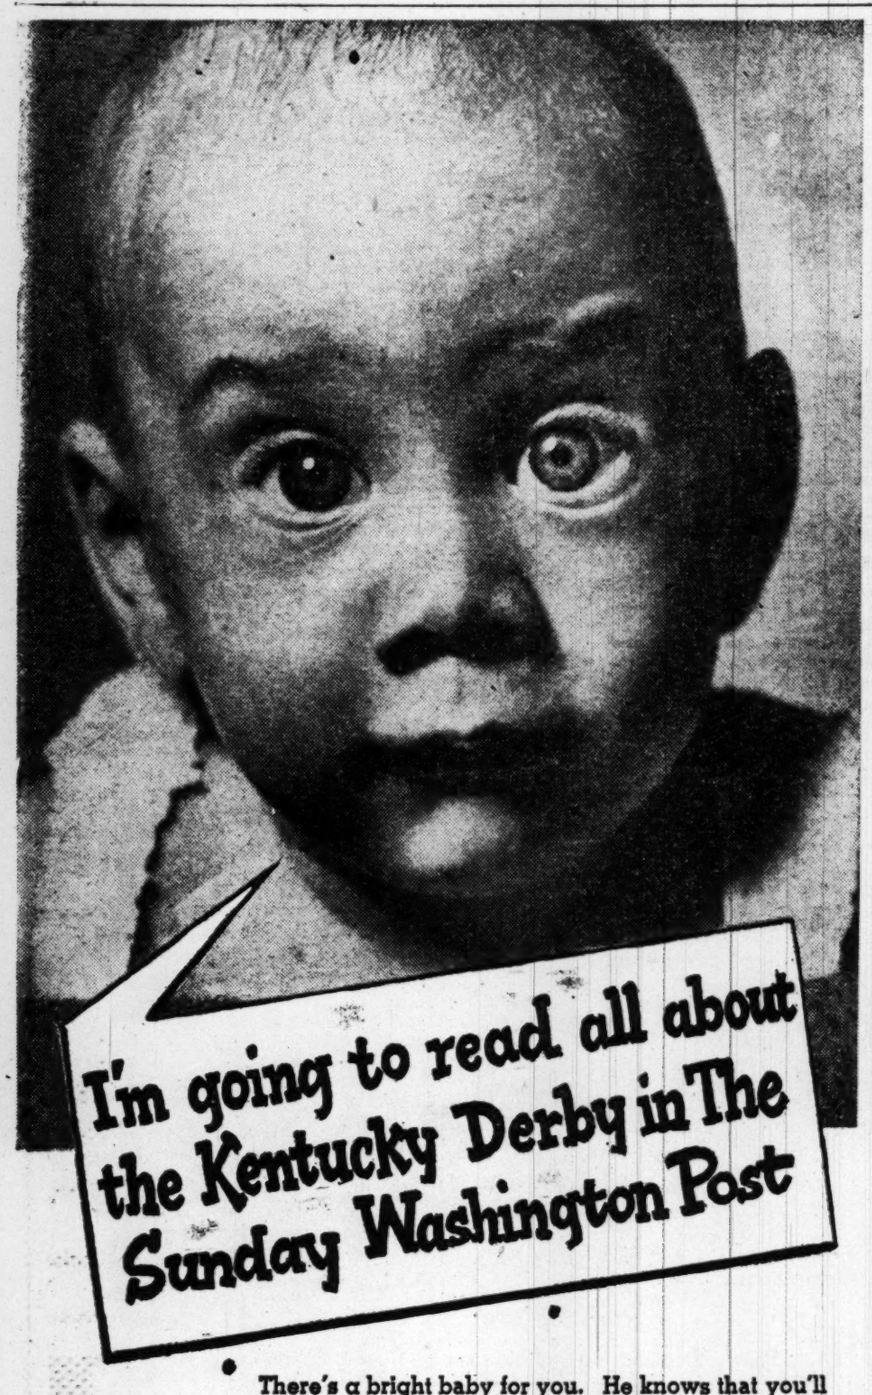
MISCELLANY

I can stop feeling self-conscious about my Ohio twang now. Ben Hastings of Cottage City, Md., tells me that an organization specializing in the study of dialects has found that folks with "the clearest, freest diction" in the Nation live in Ohio and eastern Indiana . . .

When James Bradford, messenger in the Library of Congress, won a weight-lifting championship recently, WTOP's Cody Pfanstiehl wisecracked: "He probably gets his training carrying weighty tomes" . . . Blanche Berlin of 812 Randolph st. nw. points out that the purse snatching that took place in her block the other night occurred while the street lights were temporarily out of order—a perfect setup for the thief. Maybe police ought to be alerted to patrol such areas while the servicemen are making repairs . . . Ida Barezofsky was trying to hail a cab during one of our recent downpours when a handsome gent came along, noticed her plight, and stopped a taxi for her. Then, to keep her tootsies out of the lake which had formed near the curb, Sir Walter picked Ida up in his arms, deposited her in the cab, tipped his hat, and proceeded on his soggy way . . . Kurt Hansen of 2126 Key blvd., Arlington, Va., tells me that when he lived in Southeast he also had to sign one of those "No Baby" leases, but the landlord, who lived in the same house, had a 7-year-old daughter . . . Maybe she was born at the age of 7, eh? . . . M. O. Coleman of 520 7th st. se. reports that on a recent streetcar trip entailing two transfers, his weekly pass was counted eight times by the three operators . . . I have suddenly developed a great dislike for people who keep their baby sitters up until the wee hours of the morning. Wanda McDuffee of 1105 Tuckahoe st., Falls Church, Va., tells me she reads this column "every morning that I get up in time—but seldom after baby sitting until after midnight" . . . Invalid streetcar tokens for Children's Hospital have been received from Caroline Loughborough of 2700 Q st. nw. . . . Felix A. Ury of 3800 14th st nw. and his wife, Bessie, like to wager a box of candy on their respective abilities as handicappers on the big horseraces. In the Wood Memorial, Felix won in a canter; he picked 'em one-two-three . . . Jean Craft of 115 2d st. ne. hoots at the Winnie Winkle sequence in which Winnie faints at the end of one day's strip, but at the start of the next is being led into another room—still wearing her hat, and a tight belt around her waist . . . Nat Rooter Fred Fahl, manager of Dikeman's Restaurant, objects to my saying that Dikeman's is across the street from the Treasury Department. He says: "We've been advertising for years that the Treasury Department is across the street from Dikeman's."



I'm going to read all about the Kentucky Derby in The Sunday Washington Post
There's a bright baby for you. He knows that you'll get the complete story of the Kentucky Derby in tomorrow's Washington Post. Yes, the complete story, thoroughly described by Post racing expert Walter Haight, with all the facts about the big race and a full report of the colorful details that make the Kentucky Derby one of the outstanding sports events in America.
...and there's another full page of "Bright Baby" pictures, too!

Small Business Aid Causes Rift

By Drew Pearson

White House advisers sat up late trying to get a final decision on the President"s small-business message before he left on his western trip. A highly important issue was involved with advisers split wide open over it.

Pearson

The issue was whether to promote Government loans to small business through the RFC, or to set up new private banks for loans to small business.

Lined up against RFC loans were Secretary of Commerce Sawyer, Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming and Federal Reserve Chairman Tom McCabe.

Lined up for RFC loans were Stephen Springarn, White House assistant, and Senator Taft, who, as ranking GOP member of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report, was consulted.

Both sides, however, agreed on what's happening to small business. It's can't borrow long-term risk capital.

Small business can get plenty of short-term money from commercial banks, but not 10-and 12-year money. Furthermore it can't borrow from most insurance companies, which frown on speculative ventures and also want to deal in large amounts. In addition, the private capitalists of the old days are gone, and the investment bankers won't undertake to float stocks or bonds unless the issue runs into several millions.

To remedy this, it was proposed to put the RFC in the Commerce Department and let it specialize on loans to small business. However, Secretary of Commerce Sawyer, Senator O'Mahoney and others felt that Government should not subsidize business; also should not be in the position of having life and death loan powers over business.

Therefore a plan was worked out with able Chairman Tom McCabe of the Federal Reserve Board whereby private banks could be set up, with the backing of Federal Reserve Government money, for the express purpose of lending money to small business.

It was admitted that this plan would be more complicated, but in the long run would be better than outright Government loans to small business.

Note—There's growing sentiment both inside the Government and on Capitol Hill to abolish the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Established during the Hoover Administration to cope with the Wall Street crash, it has now pretty much outgrown its need.

Barkley Philosophy

Vice President Alben Barkley has a story for almost every incident in the day.

A Senate aide stepped up to the Veep as he presided over the Senate and told him a visitor was asking for him in the Senate lobby. "Do you want to have him in your office, or will you go out to see him?" the page asked respectfully.

Barkley grinned. "That reminds me," he said, "of the loafer down South. Leaning up against a store front one day, he stared at a good-looking lady and a dog moseying down the street. A curious passer-by noted this attention and asked, 'Jake, which would you ruther go out with—the lady or the dog?'

"Well, do you know," continued the Vice President, "O' Jake, he said, 'the dog, of course. I can always get away from him.'

"And that," concluded the Vice President to the Senate aide, "is the reason why I'll go out in the lobby to see my friend."

Europe vs. McCarthy

Few people realize how badly American foreign policy has been undermined by the McCarthy-Communist campaign. Here are a few samples of what's happening abroad:

In China: The name "McCarthy" is pronounced exactly as if it were "MacArthur," and the impression has spread that General MacArthur was waging a near-revolt against the State Department. In fact, the impression has been created in some parts of the Far East, where the public is not well informed, that the United States is near revolt.

In Albania: The Communist government, after long pressure from the West, was expected to do a Tito. But it hasn't. And a partial reason has been Soviet propaganda that the State Department was full of Communists—"an American Senator says so"—and that the United States would soon come over to the Communist Albanian side.

In France, Italy, Belgium and other Atlantic Pact countries, the reaction has been most harmful of all. For some time these countries had experienced a wave of "neutrality," which has now grown to new heights. People in these once Nazi-occupied countries have argued that they did not want to get in the middle of another war, would much rather be neutral. That has been one reason for opposition to the North Atlantic Pact.

Now, on top of this neutrality wave has come the McCarthy charges of Communists in the State Department, which to poorly informed Europeans means that the United States is likely to go over to Russia leaving western Europe out on a limb.

Therefore, it's not difficult to understand why neutrality sentiment and opposition to the North Atlantic pact has grown more than ever.

Report to Senate

Prior to his departure for Europe, Secretary of State Acheson told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee behind closed doors that the United States is prepared to fight rather than retreat from Berlin.

The Hecht Co.'s Most Important Citizens

Members of our 10 to 50 and 5 to 10 Year Clubs . . .

Valued and Loyal Associates . . . our Honorary Board of Directors

Most of the nine hundred and thirty-two are meeting tonight. They're our "Honorary Board of Directors." Tonight they welcome twenty-two more Hecht Co. associates who have completed ten years of service, and 111 who have completed five years of service. All through our 54 years this group has been meeting and serving you. You, our customers, know many of them personally. There are over thirty five hundred persons in our store family. Their spirit and devotion, as typified by these Club members, have helped us serve you well and grow. In the final analysis, your patronage and recognition are the highest reward in retailing. And our "Honorary Board of Directors," whose combined service and experience adds up to over 11,000 years, are the ones who helped us achieve it . . . by helping us serve you better.

P. S. This page first appeared on May 20th, 1940, in The Washington Post and every year thereafter. We reprint this annual meeting of our Honorary Board of Directors with proper revision in names and figures to bring it up to date.

Though the club members indicated with an asterisk are retired, they're with us in spirit . . . an inspiration to all*
The Hecht Co. Association.
